Record Rainfall Pounds City

FLOODED BASEMENTS greeted hundreds of Victorians Christmas Day as an all-time record rainfall fell on this city and many lower mainland points. Dozens of municipal workers missed out on Christmas dinner as police, firemen and public works crews worked through the day and night pumping out flooded homes and clearing blocked drainage systems throughout the Greater Victoria area. Duncan Families Evacuated

The heaviest rainfall ever recorded in Victoria in a 24-hour period fell on the city Christmas Day, dampening festive spirits with flooded basements and blocked-off streets.

In a 24-hour period from 4 a.m. Christmas Day to 4 a.m. today 3.35 inches of rain was recorded at Victoria Airport compared to the previous record of 2.62 inches set in 1967.

Vancouver had an even soggier Christmas with 3.52 inches falling in 24 hours at the International Airport, breaking their old record of 3.15 inches set in 1955.

In the Duncan-Chemainus area approximately 20 people were evacuated from homes by boat as civil defence volunteers and RCMP worked through the night.

Homes in the low-lying Chemainus areas have nearly two feet of water and Cowichan Bay homes have as much as four feet.

Genoa Bay Road, leading to Maple Bay, was "washed out" but no damage was recorded, said a spokesman from Maple Bay Marina.

On the northern tip of the island two men were rescued by a Labrador helicopter from CFB Comox today from a small craggy island 40 miles southeast of Cape Scott.

The men set out Monday from nearby Spring Island in a 14-foot aluminum boat but were unable to make their way further than Lookout Island, where they spent the night.

People on Spring Island could see the men walking around the small rock but could not reach them by boat because of the roaring surf.

The men sheltered in a small shed, used to store equipment for an automatic light and foghorn that is to be installed in January.

Both Victoria and Vancouver have already broken record for total rainfall in December, with Victoria measuring 10.78 inches of precipitation so far this month compared to the old record of 8.41 inches for the whole month.

City weatherman Dennis Gallagher said today Victoria and the lower mainland are receiving as much as 10 times the rainfall reported in the heavy west coast rainforest areas.

Estevan Point and Tofino on Vancouver Island's west coast report .22 and .7 inches of rain respectively for the Christmas Day period.

Basements were flooded throughout the Victoria area forcing municipal crews to work round-the-clock pumping out homes and clearing blocked drains.

Saanich reported the most problems with 208 emergency calls from 9 a.m. Christmas Day to 1:30 a.m. today.

Five Saanich municipal crews worked throughout the night and police say calls are still coming in.

From 2 p.m. Christmas Day until 4 a.m. today over 60 calls came in to Oak Bay police, who reported that several municipal crews worked through the night.

Esquimalt was quieter with only eight emergency calls reported and just one crew working to clear backed up sewers and flooded basements.

Victoria emergency switchboard said they couldn't estimate the number of calls exceut there were "far too many."

Most municipal workmen went home to bed early this morning, but, with weathermen forecasting continued

Bulldozers Entomb Earthquake Victims

Times News Service

MANAGUA — Demolition crews today began tearing down the ruined houses in this earthquake ravaged city. A spokesman for the fire department said a 320 block area had been designated "contaminated" and would be levelled to become the tomb of those who died in the temblor.

Looting was widespread in what remained of Managua and authorities were doing very little to stop it in a city largely destined for further destruction, this time by the hand of man. But the looting now was mainly gleaning of items left from the wholesale looting of Christmas day.

Clouds of dust and smoke fumes hung over the city this morning and small fires still burned in various areas where thousands died. Some of the fires apparently were set by looters to distract official attention so they could steal more

Fire department Lt. Miguel Gonzales said roughly an area of 40 blocks by eight blocks will be razed because the thousands of dead buried beneath the rubble pose a threat to the living. "We are going to have to put lime over everything and burn it and dynamite it," he said. The air was heavy with the stench of death and authorities feared epidemics if the bodies are not buried soon.

Survivors of the devastating quake Saturday have been ordered evacuated — and officials are considering enforcing their orders at gunpoint.

The Venezuelan relief official suggested what he called "gunpoint evacuation" at a meeting Monday night as authorities — and hundreds of foreign relief workers — grappled with increasing problems of health, housing and feeding of residents who survived the powerful earthquake.

Many inhabitants refused to leave their shattered homes, some because they did not want to leave the place where kinsmen died, others because they were still in a state of shock.

There was widespread looting in the downtown part of the city Monday, including a Pepsi-Cola bottling plant where little boys ran out wearing broad smiles and carrying cartons of the soft drinks on their heads.

It remained impossible to determine how many persons died when the earthquake struck, but estimates ranged between 1,000 and 10,000.

Troops carried out mass burials, but many bodies remained buried under tons of debris, some of it piled 15 feet high in the streets. The stench of death was so powerful it drove some rescuers back choking.

To cope with transportation shortages, the government commandeered all the trucks in the country. Earlier, mar-

BELFAST SANTA IS BULLETPROOF

BELFAST (Reuter) — Santa Claus dropped in on a children's Christmas party here Sunday — but there was a bulletproof vest under his red tunic.

On Royal Avenue in the city centre, a balloon popped on a Christmas tree — and civilians ran for cover as two British soldiers swung their rifles round anticipating a battle with a sniper.

After 3½ years of "the troubles," Northern Ireland has learned to live with violence, but self-preservation is an automatic reaction even in the Christmas season.

U.S. Bombers Resume Raids Over North

Times News Services

SAIGON — U.S. bombers today resumed their raids over North Vietnam after a 36-hour Christmas halt, and the North Vietnamese delegation in Paris said B-52s were hitting Hanoi, Haiphong and other cities.

"There are no new limitations on U.S. aircraft since the bombing resumed," a U.S. command spokesman said, but declined to say whether this meant raids over Hanoi and Haiphong had resumed.

In Paris, North Vietnam accused the United States today of wanting to "flatten" Hanoi, Haiphong and other populated areas of the country and called for an immediate halt to U.S. bombings.

A statement said that "on the night of Dec. 24 and again from Dec. 26, the Nixon administration — continuing to commit crimes against the Vietnamese people — multiplied raids by B-52s and other aircraft with a view to flattening Hanoi, Haiphong and numerous other cities and populated areas of North Vietnam."

The delegation called for the return to the situation which existed before Dec. 18 — when the bombing above the 20th parallel resumed — if the United States wanted to solve the Vietnamese problem by negotiations.

The U.S. spokesman in Saigon said today Hanoi reports of U.S. air raids during the Christmas halt were not necessarily false.

U.S. reconnaissance planes may have been fired on by North Vietnamese gunners, he said, and escort fighter-bombers in such a case would have attacked the gun positions.

The timing of today's bombing meant the truce had been extended 12 hours beyond the initial 24 hours.

Informed Saigon sources said earlier today Nixon had ordered an indefinite extension of the bomb halt but later in the day, a 35-round Communist rocket barrage hit the sprawling Da Nang air base 370 miles north of Saigon.

It was not known if Nixon's order to resume the air war was linked to the Da Nang incident, although U.S. presidents in the past have ordered similar retaliatory bombing.

U.S. planes also returned to action Monday night over South Vietnam.

A military source said U.S. planes 65 miles north of Saigon Christmas night caught a 50-truck Communist supply convoy moving and strafed it, destroying 11 of the vehicles.

In ground fighting, the Saigon command today said there were at least 66 "enemy-initiated attacks" in the 24 hours ending at 1 p.m.

QUADRA LEADS SHIP SEARCH

The ministry of transport weather ship Quadra today was co-ordinating a search for possible survivors of a Liberian cargo ship that broke up 1,400 miles due west of Portland, Ore. Sunday.

A spokesman of the Pacific Rescue Co-ordination Centre at CFB Esquimalt said today that seven planes and four merchant ships were involved in the search for the bulk carrier Pacrover.

"We are using the Quadra because she is well equipped for the kind of communications that are needed for a job like this," he said.

He said there appeared to be little hope of finding the 33 Koreans in the ship's crew alive.

"We have found all four lifeboats, either overturned or swamped," he said, "there's a large oil slick. We've also found a hatch cover and a life preserver so we know we're in the right area."

U.S. navy C-130 Hercules aircraft crisscrossed the area Sunday while the Quadra steamed to the area in 50-foot seas, whipped by winds that whistled at 62 miles an hour.

The seas moderated Monday night, the waves being reduced to 12 feet with winds of 25 knots.

A plane remained at the scene all night, along with two merchant ships.

The search began after the Pacrover radioed a distress call, saying her crew was abandoning ship.

Under Liberian registry, the Pacrover was on her way to Japan after taking on a load of coal from Roberts Bank on the B.C. mainland.

C. E. Bowman of Portland, Ore. an engineer for Lasco Shipping Co. and managing agent for the vessel, said today:

"They (the crew) were all personal friends. I certainly feel sorry about that."

Of the Pacrover, he said, "Structurally, she was in fine condition. I was quite surprised to hear she had gone down."

The Pacrover, owned by Pacific Coast Shipping Co., was built as an oil tanker in the Second World War.

Ten years ago, the Ishikawajima Co. of Japan added a midsection and converted her to a bulk carrier.

She had a net weight of 8,200 tons and was carrying 10,000 tons of coal.

Harry Truman Dies at 88

Times News Services

KANSAS CITY—Harry S Truman died early today after being in a coma for three days.

He was 88 and had fought for his life since early December when lung congestion put him in hospital. (See obituary on Page 5).

A hospital spokesman said death was caused by "a complexity of organic failures causing a collapse of a cardiovascular system."

Truman, president of the United States from 1945 to 1953, led the country in the last days of the Second World War and the Korean War and authorized the first and only use of the atomic bomb in Japan, killing some 200,000 Japanese at Hiroshima and Nagasakai.

The hospital said Truman, weakened by age and suffering kidney and heart complications, died at 5:50 a.m. PST.

The former president will lie in state Thursday in the rotunda of the library that houses the memorabilia of the Truman presidency at Independence, Mo., and services will be there on Friday.

President Nixon today eulogized Truman as "a man who will be remembered as one of the most courageous presidents in our history" and ordered a national mourning period.

He designated Thursday, Dec. 28, as a national day of mourning and recommended that Americans assemble on that day in places of worship to honor the memory of the former president.

Disneyland ... Now a Holyland

The London Observer

They're digging a 15-acre Sea of Galilee, gathering animal duos for Noah's Ark and putting up the scaffolding for the Tower of Babel at a new leisure development called Holyland. It is outside Mobile, Ala.

There's to be a walled city of Jerusalem, complete with Wailing Wall. Visitors will take slave-ship rides, be swallowed by Jonah's whale and the rest in the Palm of Salvation Garden — the only thing that's free.

Holyland is divided into special areas. The Garden of Eden, ancient Babylon, ancient Rome and ancient Egypt. Ride the camel or elephant of your choice through the plastic desert to the pyramids or cheer as Christians are thrown to the lions in the 12,000-seat Colosseum (chariot races daily).

"Real" craftsmen will be seen in the act of producing genuine Greek and Roman ware. Coca-Cola libations will be poured by beaming students in antique garb. You are asked not to feed popcorn to the inmates of the ark.

This striking new 200-acre, $10 million venture has been inspired by the enormously lucrative Disneyland. Towering over this frightful concoction will be a 110-foot statue that lights up at night. A disciple of the southern millionaire who is financing Holyland says that Jesus will be as high as a 13-storey building and visible all round for five miles.

"We're pretty darned excited about the whole thing," he said. "Governor Wallace welcomed us to the state and thanked us for our reverent theme, you know."

Amen.

Snow Job For Castro

GANDER, Nfld. (CP) — Premier Fidel Castro of Cuba sent security men scurring after him Sunday when he decided to go for a toboggan ride while his plane was being refuelled at Gander International Airport.

Castro's Russian-built Illyssian jet airliner made an unscheduled stop at the airport to take on fuel while on a flight from Moscow to Havana. The plane had been scheduled for refuelling at Montreal, but the plans were changed because of bad weather there.

During the three-hour stopover in Gander, airport officials took the Cuban premier on a tour of Gander, a town of about 10,000.

The area was hit a few days ago with 14 inches of snow and Castro appeared to enjoy the 14-degree weather. He stopped to toss a few snowballs, take a toboggan ride and even help a couple of ladies shovel out their car.

Security was tight with Royal Canadian Mounted Police officers, airport security men and security officials from the Cuban party keeping close watch on the premier's activities.

rain, police predict crews will be called out overnight again.

Local police said they couldn't estimate the amount of property damage done, but in West Vancouver, where a slide 10 feet deep covered the Trans-Canada Highway, estimated damage to property is in the hundreds of thousands of dollars.

Weathermen say it will continue raining today and Wednesday, although precipitation will be lighter and a drying trend is forecast generally for the south coast of B.C.

Most local roads remained open today with Interurban blocked off in sections and parts of Sooke Road, near Dudney Flats, covered with water.

Colwood RCMP also report a mud slide on the Sooke Road near Humpback Road but the road is passable.

The Island Highway is reported open and fairly good condition.

Meanwhile, B.C. Telephone Co. crews worked around the clock during the holiday weekend, repairing damage caused by the heavy rains seeping through cables.

MISSED DINNER

Some men, a spokesman said, never even made it home to Christmas dinner.

Six cable crews and 24 troubleshooters were out today trying to mop up the damage.

In other areas of British Columbia heavy rain and snow closed off many roads.

On the 401 freeway east of Chilliwack, department of highways crews worked all night on washed out shoulders and potholes which made driving dangerous.

Heavy snow forced closure of the Rogers Pass section of the Trans-Canada highway Christmas night but work crews hope to have the pass open today.

Impaired Driving: Only Five Charged

The standard $350 impaired driving fine must have scared a lot of Christmas drinkers into investing a few dollars in taxis, Greater Victoria policemen speculated today.

Only five people were charged with impaired driving over the Christmas weekend — three in Victoria and one each in Oak Bay and Colwood.

Roadside suspensions were minimal this year with a total of 13 — four in Victoria, six in Oak Bay, three in Saanich and two in Colwood.

Esquimalt police didn't arrest any impaired drivers and issued no roadside suspensions.

In spite of all-time record rains, Victoria police reported only 10 minor accidents; Oak Bay, six; Colwood, eight; Saanich, five, and Esquimalt, none.

"I think the compulsory breath test has helped in a way. It's scared a lot of people into taking taxis," said Inspector Jack Groves of Oak Bay police.

Spokesmen from each of Greater Victoria's four municipal police departments and Colwood RCMP detachment agreed that the provincial government's advertising, warning drivers not to drink, has been a great deterrent.

Constable Bill Thomas, of Colwood RCMP said, "I think it's probably all the publicity. This time of year with road blocks, people are a little more cautious."

Local taxi companies reaped the benefits of this year's general sensible attitude toward drinking and driving.

A driver for Victoria Taxi said, "It's a smart thing to leave the driving to the taxi driver. We always do it and so do our friends."

"It's easier to spend $2 on a taxi than to go to court and spend $350," said Dolores Watson, dispatcher at Bluebird Cabs, 1001A Douglas.

"I would say people are becoming a little more cautious, not only at night but during the day too," she said.

tial law was declared to make rescue and relief operations easier.

Relief workers refused to give aid to survivors in the city's core and told them they would be fed only if they went to refugee centres on the outskirts of the city.

General Anastasio Somoza, military strongman of Nicaragua, said the main relief need in the country was food, not medical supplies. He told foreign countries not to send any more medical supplies or plasma: "We need food for the people."

$100,000 PLEDGED

Canadian Red Cross and church relief groups as well as CARE Canada quickly stepped in with funds for relief work. At the start, more than $100,000 was pledged.

The Canadian government channelled an initial grant of $50,000 through the Canadian Red Cross, CARE Canada allocated $25,000, Oxfam Canada $5,000 and Church Action for Emergency Aid, representing several Canadian church groups, made an initial contribution of $24,000.

CARE Canada said it would accept public donations at its Ottawa headquarters.

A Canadian Forces Boeing 707 carried 60,000 pounds of temporary shelters for the victims, picked up in St. Louis.

In Toronto the Canadian Red Cross was told today that relief goods are clogging all airports around Managua.

A Red Cross spokesman said a Telex from the League of Red Cross Societies in Geneva asks that no more air shipments be sent until the supplies already there can be distributed. The message also advised that no more Red Cross personnel were needed.

Other agencies around the world have also sent emergency supplies to the quake-ravaged city.

Authorities said it was impossible to assess the damage, but some officials estimated the loss at $2 billion. That would make it the most costly of three earthquakes since 1885 which have destroyed Managua.

However, Somoza declared: "We are determined to rebuild our capital."

the weather

A Pacific disturbance will bring more rain to the south coast this afternoon and be accompanied by occasion rain as it crosses the southern interior tonight. Showers will persist along the coast on Wednesday and there will be a few showers of rain or mixed rain and snow in the eastern interior. Most regions will remain cloudy although there could be a few sunny breaks. Temperatures will continue mild in all regions.

Saturn's Moon Could Hold Spark of Life

Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The largest of Saturn's nine moons is believed to have an atmosphere identical to the one that gave birth to life on earth two billion years ago.

Nobody believes there is life on this distant moon, but experts are not dismissing the possibility that some primitive form of life might flourish so far from the sun.

"It can't be the kind of life we know on earth," said Cornell University's Dr. Carl Sagan, "but it would be earth chauvinism to think that no form of life whatever could survive so far off in the solar system."

The moon is Titan, sixth moon out from the surface of Saturn, twice the size of earth's moon and the brightest of the 32 moons in the solar system.

The reason it's so bright is that Titan is the only moon in the solar system to possess an atmosphere, a finding that goes back to 1944.

What is new is the finding by astronomers at Cornell University and the University of Minnesota that Titan's atmosphere is twice as hot as scientists thought it was, a discovery that has put them in a turmoil.

Titan lies about 900 million miles from the sun and receives only 1 per cent of the sunlight the earth gets.

But infrared measurements by Cornell and Minnesota astronomers show that Titan has a minimum temperature of 150 degrees below absolute zero.

While this is almost 90 degrees below zero Fahrenheit, it's not much colder than it gets at the North Pole in winter.

"We have to ask ourselves what kind of a planet would make this atmosphere so far from the sun," Dr. Sagan said. "The only answer we've been able to come up with is something identical to our primaeval earth."

Computer models drawn up of Titan at Cornell assign it an asmosphere of hydrogen, furnished by the action of the sun's ultraviolet light on an icy surface of ammonia, water and methane.

"It is the only model that supplies the temperatures we have observed," Dr. Sagan goes on, "and it is a model that is identical to our earth two billion years ago."

One of the puzzles of this model is that hydrogen is such a light gas that it would all be blown away. How then can any planet or moon maintain a hydrogen atmosphere?

"The answer to that is," Dr. Sagan said, "you would only have to melt a few miles of ice through geologic time to have supplied Titan with this atmosphere."

The reason Titan is the only moon of Saturn to possess an atmosphere is that it's the only one large enough to support an atmosphere.

The reason some of the other large moons (like Jupiter's Ganymede and Io) have no atmosphere is unclear, but it could be that the sun baked out their atmospheres.

Dr. Sagan believs that Titan is made up almost entirely of chemical ice, except for a small molten core of radioactive rock.

This melts the ice far below the surface, forcing a kind of volcanic ice up to the surface that bursts into a brilliant red on contact with the sun's ultraviolet light.

"We see Titan as a red disc through telescopes," Dr. Sagan said, "which is exactly what we get in the laboratory when we react methane, hydrogen, water ice and ammonia with ultraviolet rays."

KISSINGER, NIXON MEN OF THE YEAR

NEW YORK (Reuter) — Richard Nixon and Henry Kissinger were named Men of the Year by Time magazine.

Time said it made the dual selection because Nixon and Kissinger together "have been changing the shape of the world, accomplishing the most profound rearrangement of the earth's political powers since the beginning of the cold war."

Noting that the two constitute an "odd couple, an improbable partnership," Time describes the president as the "champion of middle America values" and Kissinger as a "Harvard professor of urbane and subtle intelligence."

Even if the pair is unable to end the Vietnam conflict, the magazine says, they have nevertheless moved the world "from a quarter-century of great-power confrontation toward an era of negotiations."

Christmas Day.

Spokesmen said 38 soldiers, five civilians and 60 Communists were killed and another 51 government troops and 10 civilians were wounded.

The U.S. command made no comment on air operations in Laos, but other U.S. officials said they had continued through Christmas with no apparent letup.

U.S. officials had indicated earlier that the bombing halt over North Vietnam had been extended on an hour-to-hour basis while President Nixon awaited some sign from Hanoi that it was ready to agree to peace terms.

A statement by Soviet Premier Alexei Kosygin touched off speculation that he might have been in touch with Nixon.

The Canadian Forces Fleet School Esquimalt gratefully acknowledges the generous donations and contributions made by the following firms without which the Annual Fleet School Christmas Party held Thursday, 14 December, for over 400 Handicapped, Mentally Retarded and Under-privileged children would not have been possible.

BEACH BATTLE WON BY WAVES

EASTLAKE, Ohio (AP) — The Peter Welsh family put up a valiant fight against Lake Erie but—like many families up and down the shore—they lost. Their home here was devoured by Lake Erie.

"We had two hours to get out," Mrs. Welsh said, recalling the violent storm last June. "Four houses to the east of us went at the same time."

With water levels close to a record high, the lake is gulping property. As residents in several areas along the shoreline have learned to their sorrow, when the lake is up, houses go down.

Barry Pritchard of the Army Corps of Engineers' Cleveland office says he gets several calls a day from people seeking advice and assistance.

MEASURES ARE ILLEGAL

"It's very frustrating for a public official like myself, sitting in the middle," Pritchard said, because when he talks to people trying to save their homes he knows "the things they can afford to do probably aren't legal, and the things that are legal they can't afford to do."

People are dumping concrete, rock and anything they can get their hands on along the shore. Sand has been washed away, but a lot of the material available for fill is illegal because of pollutants, Pritchard said.

The Welshes launched their major effort two years ago, when the lake waters already had touched the bank below their house. With Dennie Welsh, 18, doing much of the work, the Welshes started building cribs of railway ties cross-stacked and bolted together. Then the eight-foot-high bins were shoved into the lake and filled with rock and chunks of concrete.

The cribs were a temporary success, and the Welshes enjoyed a 60-foot beach again. But the June storm, which in some places picked up concrete slabs and threw them around like wooden shingles, broke up some of the cribs, and the Welsh home was wrecked.

The Other Socialist Face

Municipal Affairs Minister Lorimer's sudden move to force the political amalgamation of territories surrounding Kamloops and Kelowna with their local city cores has sent a shudder through the province. Legal though it may be, the minister's action was a demonstration of naked, autocratic power such as has seldom been seen in this province. "I expect a great deal of flack," the minister said, using a contemptuous phrase. But he made it clear that "there will be no referendum." It has taken less than four months to come to this.

It would be stretching the facts absurdly to compare this step with others on a historic scale: Hitler annexing Austria, for instance, or Stalin collectivizing the farmers — at the ruthless cost of millions of lives. But it is very difficult to find any essential difference in the underlying philosophy. "I have personally decided what you should do," says the high authority. "And I will force you to do it."

The point at issue is not whether the amalgamation of Kamloops with surrounding communities, or the extension of Kelowna's boundaries to double its population, are desirable developments. Perhaps they are. But the principle that the end justifies the means is just as unacceptable in political actions as it is in any moral issue. And the heavy-handed, unheralded means employed by Mr. Lorimer are disgraceful in a democratic environment.

People can be persuaded to vote for projects that are in their best interests; they can be charged the costs of services if it is true that they are in effect living off the taxes of the nearby city. There are many ways, through democratic education and voting, by which public opinion may be formed and expressed. But suddenly announcing from a provincial office that "you've got to do this whether you like it or not" is not the Canadian way. It should not be allowed to pass without vigorous public protest or it will inevitably become the imposed way of government in British Columbia.

If we thought some of B.C. Hydro's actions under the Social Credit regime were high-handed, what are we to think of this Socialist sally into government? Who will next be told what is best for them: Doctors, lawyers, businessmen, a score of other municipalities? And how much in welfare grants will it take to muffle the protests?

Another Try in Rhodesia

A record of ten failures in efforts to reach a settlement between Britain and Rhodesia on the former "rebel" colony's breakaway does not encourage much optimism for another attempt. Yet, according to reports from London, one is in the making—and with some potential for success.

Indirect contacts have continued between Britain and Rhodesia since last June, when the British liaison official, Alec Ward, was withdrawn. Foreign-Secretary Sir Alex Douglas-Home has indicated Britain's determination to "try, try, try again."

Perhaps more significant is the report of a new attitude growing in Africa since Blacks rejected the terms on which accord might have been reached. Changes have occurred, notably since Uganda began its extreme course, and the resulting re-assessments may leave the Blacks of Rhodesia, and their allies, less adamantly opposed to the proposal that was presented.

JAMES RESTON

'You Defend a Civilization'

HOUJARRAY, FRANCE — The other day when Henry Kissinger was in Paris, he had a talk about the money, trade and security problems of the United States and Europe with Jean Monnet. Ever since Colonel House and Harry Hopkins, White House aides have been turning to him for help, and while they don't always take his advice, Monnet always has something sensible to say.

Monnet is now 84, still going to his office every day at number 83 Avenue Foch, still living in his thatched-roof cottage here at Houjarray in the rolling countryside west of Paris, still taking his daily walks in the Forest of Rambouillet, and still looking patiently and optimistically toward the future.

The problems of the nations change, but Monnet's approach to them seldom varies. You have to define the problems carefully, he says, and then work away at them one at a time. You can't settle everything all at once.

Varied Problems

There are, he thinks, now all sorts of problems to be discussed, with the growth of the European Common Market, the emergence of Japan and China, and the changing relations between East and West Europe and between the nations of the Middle East.

These include international monetary and trade reform, the rise of protectionism, the reconstruction of Western Europe's defence, and complex problems of regulating the multinational corporations.

The first thing, he suggests, is to talk about these things together and not separately. He would like to see established at once a small group of no more than eight men or women, four from the United States and four from the expanding European Community, to define these problems and identify "The Common Interest."

You have to "mend before you can construct," he says. There is still a fear among many people in Europe that the United States and the Soviet Union will try to organize the emerging new world order primarily in their own interests—"have another Yalta Conference," excluding some of the principal powers.

Confidence cannot be built on the spirit of domination, he insists, but only on the basis of equality between the United States, the Soviet Union and the Common Market countries. If common interests are not clearly identified, there will be no effective common action, for all these problems are interdependent, and no single action by any one country, but only common action by the principal countries, can avoid serious misunderstanding in the fields of money, trade and military security.

JEAN MONNET
". . . I always say the same"

You don't defend a nation, Monnet says, you defend a civilization. The United States and Europe have a common heritage and common ways of approaching individual liberty and commercial dealings. Therefore, while recognizing the emergence of Japan as the third most powerful economic nation, he would have the United States and Europe begin the discussion together and co-ordinate with Japan later.

Also, while he expects President Nixon to visit Europe sometime after Inauguration Day, and have bilateral conversations with other heads of Government, Monnet's hope is that questions that affect all the Common Market countries will be discussed with the representatives of the new European organization.

More Reserved

Monnet recognizes that this will be difficult, for United States official attitudes to the enlarged Common Market have become more reserved as competition from it has increased.

Also, Britain will not be in the new Common Market until next month and it is still difficult for the West Europeans to reach common policies and speak with a single coherent voice.

Nevertheless, Jean Monnet is not deterred by the difficulties of the moment any more than he was when he began the Common Market idea with the coal and steel community a generation ago.

After a long walk through the Forest of Rambouillet, his cheeks are as red as his grandson's, and his eyes as bright. He wonders why the Kissingers still come to see him since, he observes with a smile, "I always say the same thing," which is true. But what he says is the simple wisdom of a long and disciplined life of careful observation. and Monnet will be in Washington early in the new year applying it again to the problems of 1973 and beyond.

LETTERS FROM OUR READERS

Home Care

I should like to bring to the attention of the public the existence, since May 1, 1972, of a trial service called the Victoria Home Care Project.

This has been made available by the provincial government, at no direct charge to the patient, to those in all four municipalities of Greater Victoria. It is run, under the supervision of the patient's own doctor, by qualified people (nurses, physiotherapists and homemakers) who take a personal interest in their patients with beneficial results.

One of the benefits of the service is to release acute hospital beds. Obviously it cannot apply to all, but there must be many patients who would benefit by early return to home and family, safe in the knowledge that basic hospital needs will be looked after by the thoughtful, capable and well-administered staff of the service.

The duration of the service at home is designated when the patient is discharged, but this can be extended if necessary. Any complication arising is dealt with promptly through the doctor concerned.

I cannot speak too highly of this service. I believe that if more of the public were aware of it, and more of the doctors advocated it, it would help to solve, in part, our British Columbia hospital admissions problem which is, in my opinion, calamitous — Charlotte Stopford, M.B., Ch.B., 37 Beach Drive.

Unthinkable?

In Weekend Magazine's report on capital punishment, one of the reasons given by abolitionists is "the danger of executing an innocent man."

I believe this deserves some comments. First of all, we do not live in an age of mob lynching or Kangaroo courts.

The accused man is on trial, in front of judges and juries who follow the long-established rules of British justice. It is unthinkable that twelve citizens, from different walks of life, could all make a mistake, for, if there is the slightest doubt as to the guilt of the defendant the verdict will certainly be in favor, not against him.

Society seeks justice, not revenge. We must believe in the fairness and competence of our judicial system which is a vital and essential part of our faith in democracy.

And, even granting the hypothetical possibility of error — maybe one in a hundred years — should we really be ready to shed many tears of compassion for an improbable "innocent" when thousands of real innocent victims die every year at the hands of criminals?

There is a divine law, called the "Ten Commandments" inscribed not only on two tables of stone, but deeply rooted in the conscience of all normal men. If men would listen to the inner voice of their conscience that would be, at least, part of the answer to the question of retention or abolition of the death penalty. — A Citizen

B.C. House

Re your editorial of December 14 "Preserve this great asset", I do not agree that B.C. House in London has any value, or is providing direct benefit to the average traveller from British Columbia.

My husband and I visited B.C. House in 1956 and were less than impressed by its dingy appearance, and lack of space for reading and writing. No courtesy was given, and little information could be obtained from the Canadian reception clerk. There was a guest book to sign if one wished.

On subsequent trips abroad I did not visit B.C. House, until 1970, with a friend. To me, the place had improved slightly, but my friend was shocked to think that this was an extension of "Beautiful B.C.".

Its service to travelling British Columbians seemed limited to the jean-clad and long-haired bodies of both sexes. On entering we had to step over bed-rolls, ruck-sacks, blankets and rain-gear to approach the reception desk, presided over by two English women. We also noticed that the small reading and writing room upstairs lacked comfortable chairs, only straight ones at the small writing tables, and those fully occupied by the above mentioned travellers.

In speaking to others who have been to London, I haven't heard of their visiting B.C. House, or No. 1 Regent Street, and in most cases they don't even know of it, with the exceeption of the "young travellers", who perhaps call for mail and hope for information.

Yes, Mr. McDonald, you may as well close down this so-called "great asset", unless you think it has worth in the commercial scheme of things. — Mrs. Marjorie Dary, 403-909 Pendergast St.

Majority Choice

The Australian government's announced policy for a republic and removal of the Jack from their flag is refreshingly honest, assuming it represents the ascertained majority of the people, and is better than our own method of whittling away our institutions by politicians intent on pleasing a supposedly discontented minority vote.

As for the Crown, I suggest personal freedom and honest administration are less evident with republican governments, and as for flags, of which there are quite enough already, I note the attitude of the people of Hawaii that a flag featuring the Union Jack can be both distinctive, honorable, and a tribute to history. In any event and in any country ultimate choices are for the ascertained majority alone. Those of us interested in such changes should establish the advantages of their cause, obtain their majority, and quit whittling. — S. R. Forrest, 417-2100 Granite St.

'He Must Choose from Scenarios Already Written'

BRUCE HUTCHISON

Almost to his surprise, the mid-winter pilgrim in Ottawa finds it physically undamaged by the political earthquake of October 30. The bastard but noble Gothic of Parliament Hill still looms against the frozen river and the dark, mammary swell of the Laurentians. The House of Commons chamber is newly scrubbed and polished for the decisive battle in January. The statesmen are on holiday, from the ski lodges of British Columbia to the hot sands of the West Indies. Peace, perfect peace, broods over the Hill.

But the white facade is very thin, and the Christmas carol was grimly Gothic, like the architecture. Behind them, what strategies and desperate adventures are under way the visitor can only guess. He must choose, as he pleases, among the many scenarios already written and probably false.

According to the most popular script, the government introduces a motion of confidence after a Throne Speech said to be as historic as Magna Carta. The official opposition moves an amendment of no-confidence. The NDP moves a sub-amendment cunningly worded, on far-out, socialist lines, to prevent the Conservatives from supporting it, defeating the government and precipitating an early election in which David Lewis would expect to lose heavily. Thus the government is saved by a split opposition. The crisis passes. The Liberal Party, though shattered and humiliated, is still in business.

As the government well knows, however, this scenario, like that of any Hollywood spectacular, depends upon the director, the actors and the mood of the national audience. Pierre Trudeau, the director, could blow it with a few regrettable words, a typical tantrum. His ministerial cast in the treasury benches might muff their lines or bungle their legislation. The audience may tire of the show before Act One is finished.

Far more dangerous than any accident is the unknown intention of that quiet, shy and underestimated man, Robert Stanfield, who knows with Emerson, that when you strike a king you must strike to kill. Certainly he intends to strike at once, defeat the government, take office and win a majority in an early election, if he can.

The vital question, then, the denouement of this queer drama, is whether he will swallow his Conservative principles for the moment, support the NDP motion, no matter what it says, and instantly destroy his brilliant rival. Must the brief morning glory of Pierre Trudeau end in a mere parliamentary gamble?

Mr. Stanfield sits undisturbed behind his huge desk, apparently without the least anxiety at the grand climateric of his sober career. His speech is soft and slow, his thoughts expressed in seemingly candid language, his economic policies (as the visitor may suspect) somewhat dubious and contradictory. But in fact he is saying little and, one supposes, is glad that the government misunderstood and foolishly disparaged him from the beginning — a shrewd, disarming poker player from the Maritimes where the cards are always held close to the vest.

So he holds them now, to tantalize the government, and they may contain a royal flush. Whatever they contain, he does not say how he will play them. He answers all questions politely, warms the visitor with natural, old-fashioned modesty but tells him nothing of importance. This man has learned better than Mr. Trudeau the power of silence, the peril of the street-corner soliloquy, the hot-line wisecrack, the easy wit.

To the ignorant observer the prime minister's hand looks appallingly weak and, up to election day, was played so badly that his government can hardly believe the ballot count. Yet there is much more to his strange story than mistakes and mathematics.

A child born to wealth and privilege, a scholarly youth who roamed the world fancy-free, a novice politician who leapfrogged his veteran competitors and reached the summit against all the rules of the game, a mature man who never knew adversity in private or public life, has suddenly, unbelievably, suffered his first cruel stroke of misfortune.

As in Greek tragedy, hubris led straight to nemesis. Or if not quite nemesis, so far, at any rate to shipwreck on a barren shore which somehow the experienced traveller's eye, and the telescopes of his expert guides, failed to see.

In this disaster he is at his best, blaming himself alone, comforting his colleagues by his stoic courage. But can his leaky ship be repaired and refloated? Or is this indeed the end of a short, triumphant but ill-mapped voyage?

No one can tell yet, of course, though Mr. Trudeau's hopeful strategy is clear enough. His government will live dangerously from day to day with the alternating support of the Conservatives or Socialists, depending on the immediate issue before the House — a kind of cross-ruff as it is called in the game of bridge.

Then, if the game is spun out for six months or so, without a fatal vote in some midnight division, the government will gradually rebuild its strength in the English-speaking provinces and Mr. Stanfield's momentum will be lost. By autumn, perhaps, the Liberal party will revive and the Conservatives wither before the polls open again.

This scenario, like the others, is exceedingly iffy and may be too clever, or too naive, by half. It hangs on the unlikely refusal of the Conservatives and the socialists ever to vote jointly against the government on any question of confidence. It assumes, also, that the nation will tolerate indefinitely a postponement of all great decisions when they are most required by problems too long neglected and unsolved. For the central fact in Ottawa today is that Canada has no government capable of governing in the true sense, and no chance of getting such a government until it votes in the next election.

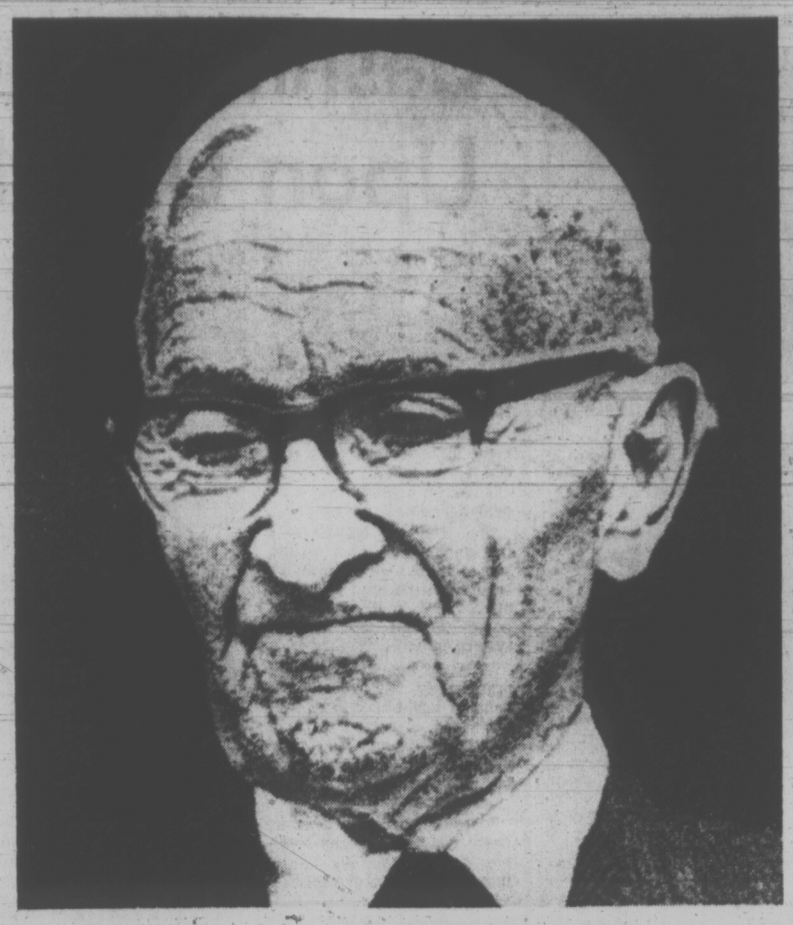
Truman: Destiny Maker

By UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

The abilities of Harry S Truman were anything but common. But to his countrymen and the world he came to symbolize the potential, when history demands it, of the common man.

The "Man of Independence" molded the destiny of the United States and the world with unprecedented decisions — the atomic bombing of Japan, the Marshall Plan, the Berlin blockade airlift, Korea —and many more.



They called him a stooge

"I did what had to be done," he once said.

That is the way the fiery little Missourian wanted to be remembered.

Fate permitted Truman to outlive most of those with whom he shared a place in history — Stalin, Churchill, De Gaulle, MacArthur, Eisenhower and even Thomas E. Dewey, whom he defeated in the 1948 presidential elections in one of the most stunning upsets in U.S. political history.

He once said that a man could have no better epitaph than one he saw inscribed on a frontier grave in Arizona. It said: "Here lies Jack Williams; He done his damndest."

Truman truly was a man of independence. It was his way of life as well as his hometown.

He was vice-president the day that Franklin D. Roosevelt died on April 12, 1945, and found himself holding the reins of the mightiest nation in the world in one of the most critical periods in history.

Truman was the 33rd president of the United States and served until Jan. 20, 1953, the day Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower succeeded him in the White House.

During his years of decision and consequence, not only for the nation but the world as well, he gave the order to drop the atomic bomb that ended the war with Japan in the Pacific.

He gave the go-ahead for the development of the hydrogen bomb, called Russia's bluff in Berlin and ordered an airlift to keep the city supplied despite a Soviet blockade.

His most difficult decision, Truman said, was ordering troops into Korea in a "police action" that kept Communist troops from advancing past the 38th parallel.

Russians Ousted

He enunciated the Truman doctrine to keep Russia out of southern Europe, supported the Marshall Plan for keeping Russia out of western Europe, presided at the birth of the United Nations and was a key mover in creation of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

Truman devised the point four plan of technical assistance to underdeveloped nations, serving not only as commander-in-chief of the U.S. armed forces, but as the chief executor of U.S. foreign policy.

Truman had enemies. He was the object of an assassination attempt during his presidency. He had many critics who disagreed with him, quarreled with him and ridiculed him at times.

But nobody ever accused Truman of not making decisions.

History will remember, too, that he referred to the Alger Hiss case as a "red herring," that he once seized the steel industry in an action which the supreme court ruled illegal, and that he unceremoniously fired Gen. Douglas MacArthur during the Korean conflict.

He rose from precinct captain in brawling Kansas City, through county office and the U.S. senate. He loved politics and played it well — so well, in fact, that he pulled one of the greatest upsets in the nation's political history with his re-election in 1948.

He was a colorful public figure, too. He wore gaudy sports shirts on his vacations in Key West, Fla., he played the piano, he wore steel-rimmed glasses, he spoke with a peppery, midwestern twang, and he took long walks in the early morning hours.

He hurled invective at some of his critics, once referring to a columnist as an "S.O.B." He wrote a letter while president threatening a music critic with bodily harm for being unkind to the singing voice of his daughter, Margaret.

1953: Truman leaves the White House

The music critic had hit Truman where it hurt most — in his family. For Truman was a devoted family man, and he would not tolerate any aspersions on his wife, Bess, whom he called "The Boss," or on his daughter.

And Truman, a Baptist, was a religious man. He once said in a television interivew, after he had left the White House, that religion had sustained him in many of his more difficult periods.

Truman was born May 8, 1884, in an unpretentious frame house in the little southwestern Missouri town of Lamar. His parents, John and Martha Truman, gave him the letter "S" as a middle name in tribute to his grandfathers, who were named Shipp and Solomon.

Piano Lessons

When Truman was four years old, the family, one of old American stock from Kentucky, moved to a 600-acre farm near Independence, Mo.

Young Truman lived a normal farmboy life, performing his chores and attending school.

Between chores and school, Truman learned to play the piano — at his mother's insistence — and became an accomplished amatuer musician.

About the time he was acquiring a taste for music, Truman was thinking about military life as a career. He sought entry to West Point but was turned down because of poor eyesight.

Since his parents could not afford to send him to college, he went to work after graduating from high school. He worked for $3 per week in a drug store. Then he worked in the circulation department of the Kansas City Star, was timekeeper for a constuction gang, and worked as a bank clerk.

His military ambitions were not forgotten, however. He enlisted in the National Guard. And when the United States entered the First World War, he was commissioned as a first lieutenant and later became captain of Battery D, 129th Field artillery, 35th Division.

Sweetheart

On June 28, 1919, Truman married his childhood sweetheart, Bess Wallace, the daughter of one of the oldest and most prominent families in the area.

The couple had one child, their daughter, Margaret, who was born in 1924.

While Truman was in the army he had saved considerable money. After the war, he and a friend, Eddie Jacobson, pooled their resources and opened a haberdashery store in Kansas City.

Their business venture flourished until the first postwar depression. Then it failed. Truman lost $15,000, but paid it all back — the last payments being made after he became a U.S. senator.

Thus, in 1921, he faced the prospect of finding work or returning to the farm. But a friend from the army, Jim Pendergast, thought perhaps his uncle could help Truman.

The uncle was Kansas City Democratic "boss" Tom Pendergast.

Pendergast did find a job for Truman, as a county highway overseer. A year later, Truman won election as a member of the county court.

Truman's new job had nothing to do with jurisprudence but, nevertheless, he began studying law. For two years he attended night classes at the Kansas City Law School, where his dean later recalled him as an outstanding student.

The Pendergast political machine was under constant attack for graft. But Truman's integrity was never questioned.

Having made his record in the county court, Truman looked toward new fields. Pendergast suggested that Truman seek the Democratic nomination for U.S. senator.

Truman entered the senatorial race in 1934 and won. He was re-elected in 1940, despite bitter attacks that called him a "stooge" of the Pendergast machine.

War Years

Truman's greatest fame before he became president arose from his work as chairman of the senate committee on national defence. The group came to be called the Truman war investigating committee, and it kept a close watch on war production to guard against profiteering and faulty workmanship.

In his final term of office, Truman was forced to defend his administration against charges of corruption in the internal revenue bureau and tax division of the justice department.

Truman refused to invoke the Republican-sponsored Taft-Hartley Labor Act, which he abhorred, and acting under what he termed the "inherent powers" of the presidency, seized the steel mills.

Truman took one of his worst judicial lickings in office over the steel issue. Steel managment took the federal seizures to the Supreme Court. The high court, in an historic decision, reversed the president.

It was during 1950 that an attempt was made on Truman's life.

On the afternoon of Nov. 1 Griselio Torresola and Oscar Collazo, Puerto Rican revolutionaries who lived in New York, attempted to shoot their way into Blair House, where the president was living.

Failing Health

The attempt was thwarted by police and secret service guards in a wild shooting affray on Pennsylvania Avenue. The president was unharmed. Both gunmen, were shot down. Torrisola was killed and Collazo wounded. Collazo later was sentenced to death but Truman commuted the sentence to life imprisonment in 1952, a few months before he left office.

Truman had failed noticeable in recent years, possibly beginning with injuries suffered in a fall in the bathroom of his home in October, 1964.

He continued to make public appearances, to journey at intervals to New York to see his daughter, Margaret, Mrs. Clifton Daniel, and his three grandsons, and to take obvious delight in daily visits to his office until the fall of 1966.

Visits with the former president were limited thereafter only to close friends, and Independence residents living near the big old house on Delaware Street seldom saw their famous neighbor again.

One of Truman's greatest dreams was realized on July 6, 1957, when the Harry S. Truman library was dedicated.

The library, containing 3.5 million of his letters, documents and records of his administration, was handed over to the National Archives for operation and preservation."

In the relatively quiet years that followed his return to Independence, Truman had published three volumes of memoirs.

He also had done a series of network television shows and written a continuing series of acticles for a newspaper feature syndicate. In January, 1966, he was nominated for the Nobel Peace Prize by Sen. Edward V. Long.

Shortly before his 80th birthday, Truman remarked that he expected to live "at least 'til I'm 90."

"There's still a lot I want to do at the (Truman) library," he said. "It will take about 10 years."

1948: Truman with erroneous headline after election victory

'Missouri Clodhopper' Gave the Best He Had

By EDWARD T. FOLLIARD
Washington Post

WASHINGTON — In appraising a man, and trying to understand him, it helps to know something about his heroes.

Harry S Truman had two great heroes — Andrew Jackson and Robert E. Lee — and some of the qualities of both could be seen in his own makeup. He was scrappy and courageous, like Old Hickory. There also was in him some of the mixture of iron and gentleness that characterized the noble Virginian.

In most ways Mr. Truman was like neither of these men. He was just plain Harry Truman, a sometimes impetuous Missourian who "shot from the hip," and who did things and said things that many Americans felt were unworthy of a president of the United States.

Those who felt that way, and they were in the millions, were convinced that he was "not big enough for the job." He knew about that appraisal, of course, but never quarreled with it. His answer was: "Who is big enough?"

Many Americans had a hard time making a distinction between the Truman who wrote unwise letters such as the scorching one he wrote Paul Hume, music editor of the Washington Post, (for saying that daughter Margaret didn't sing very well) and Truman the statesman, who approached great affairs solemnly and prayerfully.

The professional historian will make that distinction. He will weigh Mr. Truman's personal eccentricities against his solid achievements.

John L. Sullivan, who served as secretary of the navy in the Truman administration, once made an observation that seemed to me to epitomize the Missourian.

"He swallowed the lions and choked on the gnats," said Sullivan.

In talking about gnats, Sullivan had in mind such things as Mr. Truman's unfortunate "red herring" remark, which seriously affected the fortunes of the Democratic party. He also had in mind, no doubt, his terrific sense of loyalty, which kept him from firing cronies who were hurting him.

Having covered Mr. Truman for the seven and a half years that he was in the White House, I was most impressed by three of his qualities — his modesty, his friendliness, and his great courage.

I was reminded of his modesty when he came back to Washington in 1953 to attend the funeral of his good friend, Chief Justice Fred M. Vinson. We were in his suite at the Mayflower Hotel, and I remarked that it had been a great honor and privilege to report on his historic and exciting years in the White House.

'Swallowed the lions and choked on the gnats'

He leaned over, smiled shyly, and said: "They were all right for a Missouri clodhopper, weren't they, Eddie?"

Some used to write that he was "cocky." He didn't like that and said so one day at a news conference. He said he preferred the word "confident." He certainly was that — even when his political stock was at its lowest.

It is doubtful if any president ever experienced such ups and downs in his personal popularity.

I was assigned to cover him at a time when his stock was at a record high. This was in June, 1945, Dr. George Gallup's surveyors were talking to a cross-section of Americans at the time, and found that 87 per cent approved of the way the Missourian was handling his job. FDR at the peak of his popularity, had been able to score no more than 84 per cent.

It required no pollsters to discern Mr. Truman's widespread popularity at this time. In traveling about the country with him, all of us could see it and feel it. It was truly a new "era of good feeling." The victory in Europe had something to do with it. But more important, perhaps, was the attitude of those who had felt frustrated by Roosevelt's long sway in the White House. They liked this friendly Missourian, who had said the moon and thestars had fallen on him and who had asked people to pray for him.

The 1946 off-year elections, in which the Republicans captured Congress, were a terrible blow to Mr. Truman. He always referred to the outcome as "a calamity." In time, however, he turned the calamity into a triumph, using the record of the Republican-controlled eightieth congress as his chief issue in the campaign of 1948.

I had a farewell interview with Mr. Truman just before he left the White House in January, 1953. He said that his '48 victory was the high spot of his administration. The hardest decision he ever had to make, he said, was the one that sent American fighting men into Korea. As for General Eisenhower's victory in '52, he attributed it to three things—"demagoguery, glamor and character assassination, by which I mean McCarthyism."

All that Mr. Truman asked while he was alive was that his countrymen believe that he had tried hard, and that he had given the best he had.

Mr. Truman held the view that at least 50 years had to pass before historians could size up an American president. He never expected to be listed among the great presidents. He did hope, however, that he might be called a good one.

Sir Winston Churchill, one of the leading historians of his time, was not willing that an appraisal of Mr. Truman be left to those writing 50 years after his death. In an article in the April 29, 1958, issue of Look magazine, Sir Winston praised the Missourian's role in the Korean War and said of him:

"His celerity, wisdom and courage in this crisis make him worthy, in my estimation, to be numbered among the greatest of American presidents."

Israel Driving Hussein Away

MANCHESTER GUARDIAN
An Editorial

Is Israel really annexing the occupied Arab territories? The establishment of Jewish settlements and communities in these areas points to annexations, and Israel's scornful reaction to the resolution at the end of this month's UN General Assembly debate reinforces this impression.

Israel argues that it still wants a peace agreement, but its action makes that agreement harder to reach. Israeli settlements on the West Bank are reinforced because it is thought that King Hussein cannot make peace.

As a result, King Hussein finds it even harder to make peace because of the greater Israeli presence. This is a vicious circle which, in the particular case of King Hussein, drives the Arab ruler closest to a settlement with Israel farther away.

Israel has so often faced hostile resolutions at the UN that it might be forgiven at first sight for reacting as it did to the latest Assembly vote. But Israel could well take a second look at both the content of the resolution and the way nations voted.

The resolution called not unreasonably for Israel to "declare publicly its adherence to the principle of non-annexation of territories through the use of force," and to "desist from all policies and practices affecting the physical character or demographic composition of the occupied Arab territories."

Rejection of these principles implies that the settlement in Sinai, Gaza, the West Bank and the Golan Heights are there to stay. It has been noted before that where settlements have been put up, the new border has never in the end been far away.

The voting was significant from two aspects. The coalition of Common Market members (as from the New Year) softened the initial resolution sufficiently for the United States, Israel's prime backer, to shift from opposition to the ranks of the abstainers (31 in all at the end).

Co-operation among the EEC members over Middle East policy has happened before. But it makes the point that, whatever the disgust at operations involving letter bombs and hijackings, there is a shift in opinion over the future status of the occupied territories which is leaving Israel in the minority.

The counterbalance to Israel's official stance may well come from Israel itself. For some time a debate, stoked up by the prospect of a general election by the end of 1973 and a successor to Mrs. Meir, has been raging over the question of Israel's frontiers.

The question of withdrawal raises fundamental and often incompatible problems for Israel. It comes down to the equation of how much land with how few Arabs is most secure for Israel. Within Israel, views are not all one way.

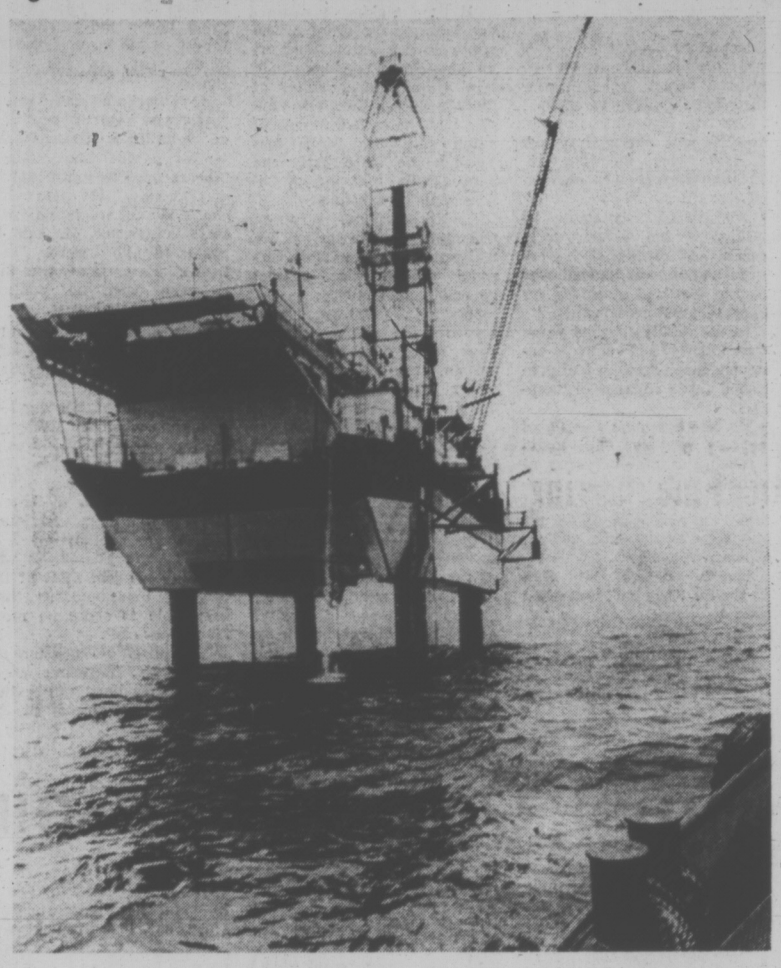
Natural gas drill rig Mr. Neil has been at work in Lake Erie since 1968



Mr. Neil, Consumer's Gas company's natural gas driller, has been operating in Lake Erie, 14 miles southeast of port Burwell, Ont., since 1968.

The massive $1.4 rig, a self-propelled, self-elevating unit is manned by three five-man crews. Two crews alternate shifts on board while one is on shore leave.

Each crew consists of a driller, a motorman, a derrickman and two helpers who work a 12-hour shift in the 24-hour operation for eight days, take four days off, work for eight more and take five off. For recreation the crew either play cards or watch television.

Since drilling for natural gas in Fort Lake Erie began in 1913, some 708 wells have probed deep into the floor of the lake. Today, 265 are producing.

Work aboard the Mr. Neil continues around the clock from May to mid-October, depending on the weather.

Cashless Society Almost Upon Us, Claims Banker

EDMONTON (CP) — A truly cashless society is on the way, says Fred H. McNeil, president of the Canadian Bankers' Association.

"It is coming in an evolutionary way and is already with us to some degree," McNeil said in an interview.

"The charge card is an element in this; cash or a cheque are directly not exchanged in a transaction even though pieces of paper are."

The Montreal banker said the computer is seen as the key in charge card operations because of the need to handle almost 4.5 million cheques going through the banking system daily.

"Without computers, the approximately 99,000 people in banking would have to be doubled, and of course there is doubt that this number of people to do clerical work could be amassed in our present type of society.

"More importantly, it would likely not be physically feasible to handle the sheer number of pieces of paper involved."

NO WESTERN BIDS

McNeil "categorically denied" there is any Bay Street bias against Western Canada by the chartered banks.

Funds are not held back from the West in favor of Eastern interests and, for this reason, there would seem to be little reason to establish regional banks which would not add to the sum of money available in the regions.

"Of course the banks are keen to lend money — that's our business. We're a national system very much in tune with developments in all parts of Canada and to helping the country grow."

McNeil had no comment as to why Western businessmen tend to feel their requirements are not met by the present banking system. "This view is not supported by the facts."

It could be, he said that certain small businesses have been turned down in their application for a loan. If the situation was investigated, it could be found they were simply not economic propositions.

HOLD FOREIGN MONEY

In wide-ranging comments on the banking scene, McNeil said at least 25 per cent of the resources and assets of Canadian banks are in foreign currency, as the Canadian banking system is uniquely suited to the country's particular basic economic problems.

"Size is of consequence in international banking; that's where you need the muscle."

Expanding on Canada's role in international finance, he said there is a dedication among all Western nations to solve the problems involved "and I believe answers will be found."

"The amount of world trade has increased phenomenally and the world has become linked back and forth in commercial transactions."

A stable system of international currency exchange is essential, complex though it is.

A GROWTH INDUSTRY

McNeil, who strongly recommends banking as a career for young people today, says there have been more changes in the industry in the last five years, and will be in the next 10, than in all the previous history of banking.

"It's a growth indutry, particularly in international operations, and salaries are more than competitive."

Banks all had comprehensive training programs amounting in each case to many millions of dollars.

He said banks are becoming larger because the customer doesn't believe the old saying that you can only borrow money from a bank if you can prove you don't need it.

"The growth in consumer loans in the last dozen years demonstrates that point."

Pop Can Radio Sold Russians

By ERNEST HOLSENDOLPH
New York Times

The American businessman stepped out of his limousine and pulled up his collar to ward off Moscow's cold December air. He hurried to the Kremlin gate and passed through, clutching his briefcase.

Inside the building he slipped a small object from his briefcase and put it into his pocket. He entered the reception room. They were all there — officials of the Soviet ministry of trade and Premier Aleksei Kosygin himself.

Sidling up to Kosygin, the American struck up a conversation.

Suddenly, he pulled the object from his pocket. The premier was mildly amused. It was a red, white and blue Pepsi-Cola can. The American stroked the can, and music poured forth.

It was actually a radio, disguised as a Pepsi can, turned to a Moscow Station. The premier laughed aloud.

The American was Donald M. Kendall, supersalesman, chairman and chief executive officer of Pepsico, Inc.

With his foot planted in the door, he landed his big sale last month after 11 months of work: Pepsi-Cola would become the first American consumer product to be made and sold in the Soviet Union. It's a big deal — but just one of several that have marked the career of the 51-year-old executive.

For some time there has been speculation in Washington that Kendall would land some high position in the Administration. But Kendall, a close friend of President Nixon, who had acted as a lawyer for Pepsico in the mid-1960's, had denied it all along — Kendall seems to be having too much fun running a thriving billion-dollar multinational corporation.

There's just no way, his friends agree, that Kendall — a blunt, vigorous, gregarious, resourceful, fully dedicated businessman — could fit into the bureaucratic grist mill. No matter that some people in Tanzania and Squib, Wash., where Kendall was born, still think that Joan Crawford, the actress, runs Pepsi.

Kendall is Pepsi.

The confusion about Miss Crawford is understandable. She is the widow of Alfred N. Steele, who was president of the Pepsi-Cola Co. She serves on the board of the company — now a Pepsico subsidiary — and travels around the world promoting its cola drink.

Recently Kendall talked in his drawingroom-like office in Purchase, N.Y., about Pepsico, the company's expansion moves and his dramatic disclosure of Soviet deal.

The agreement with the Russians, providing Pepsico with the opportunity to sell Pepsi-Cola in the Soviet Union in exchange for the company's marketing of Soviet vodka, wine and brandy in the United States, began 12 months ago when Kendall visited Moscow as part of a United States trade mission.

Vancouver-Founded Wine-Art Issues Shares on U.S. Firm

VANCOUVER (CP) — Although Vancouver-based North American Wine-Art is this month going public in the United States but not in Canada, founder Stanley Anderson says he "hasn't sold out."

The U.S. affiliate, Wine Art of America, already holds majority control of Wine-Art's original Canadian stock, and is offering 35 per cent of its holdings in a 250,000-share issue.

Anderson said he is not going public in Canada because the firm is already deep into the Canadian market and does not need major financing here.

Anderson and his wife will remain the largest individual shareholders, and he will retain control of technical methods and licensing and supply arrangements.

The Wine-Art empire of stores, boutiques and consultation centres now has close to 30 outlets in Canada and about 80 in the U.S. Anderson feels there probably will be 130 North American outlets by the end of this year, with total sales estimated at $18 million.

He says the ultimate North American sales potential is close to $100 million — between $8 million and $9 million of that in Canada and "we are already half-way there." The U.S. potential is $90 million.

More than 20 years ago, Anderson, a food technologist turned industrial sales representative by the Borden Co. of Canada, was having problems learning his hobby, winemaking.

By 1960, he had learned the technical tricks of winemaking but was still having problems, this time with getting equipment and supplies from various overseas specialists.

He borrowed $800 on his life insurance and opened a small Vancouver store registered as Wine-Art Sales Ltd., planning to provide a single, convenient source of winemaking materials for local amateurs.

The first years were precarious. In 1965, there were only three Wine-Art Stores in British Columbia, and sales totalled $188,000. Net profit after management salaries of $14,000 was $93.71.

Anderson's appeal for financing at that time was "laughed out of banks and investment houses" so he decided to expand via franchising.

Another Bordon Co. executive, E. G. Arthurs of Toronto, sold his house and gave up 22 years of seniority to take the Ontario franchise in 1965. He now has expanded into several profitable outlets.

In 1966, Karl Hansen, a Manitoba civil servant, took the franchises for Manitoba and Saskatchewan, then later acquired Alberta. In 1967, Ralph Ritchie, a struggling competitor in Quebec, switched sides and took the franchise for Quebec and the Maritimes.

Sales in Canada approached $500,000 annually by 1967, and an American wine expert, Wallace Pohle, took Wine-Art to San Francisco.

"Every franchise holder was himself a winemaker — probably a Wine-Art customer — before he came into the business," says Anderson. "So he's been through all the ropes. All employees have to be winemakers, too."

Anderson says the pride people take in creating their own wine is a greater profit than the ability to make wine for as little as 30 cents a bottle.

"Making decent wine is hard work," he says. "It takes patience."

It takes about $30 for a beginner to get his first 30 bottles of wine, but this includes re-usable equipment. Serious amateurs often have $100 invested in equipment plus a corner of the basement turned into a wine cellar.

Main future problem is supply. "We need good grapes for concentrate, and if there is a glut of good fruit anywhere in North America, we'll take it," says Anderson.

High Wire Opens Mines

VANCOUVER (CP) — Eight years of research by the Canadian Pulp and Paper Research Institute has sparked a United States-developed system for recovering ore via a single-wire tramway system.

The system is the result of problems faced by a 21-year-old University of Idaho student, Martin Clements when he took an option on a steep hillside of timber with the intention of selling the wood for mining props.

Since an access road could not be built, Clements began investigating the possibility of a tramway. In his investigation, he came across the research done by the pulp and paper institute.

The institute had not developed a workable scheme but provided a solid base for further research by Clements who continued to explore the idea even after his timber option lapsed.

He brought in two friends, Don Hoss, 52, chief electrician in a plywood plant, and Jim Lindl, 20, a student.

Together, the trio developed the ore-timber-industrial-slide — OTIS for short. They claim the single-wire tramway system is capable of moving up to 780 tons of ore down precipitous cliffs and across glaciers and chasms.

They have developed a high-tensile wire one-fifth of an inch thick matched with an alloy carrying hook that resists heat build-up.

They also developed a special support for the wire comprising a suspended double-flanged wheel with slots cut in it. The ends of the flanges support a shoe bolted to the wire. As a support hook moves through the carrier, it catches in one of the slots and is passed through, with the wheel automatically indexing to receive the next hook. The shoe remains stationary within the wheel.

Support wheels can be placed at intervals along long straight lengths of wire, and can also accommodate angles of up to 45 degrees.

Using sharp angles it is possible to zig-zag a wire down a cliff face too steep to permit a straight descent.

Clements and his partners have designed braking systems and plastic container bags each capable of holding up to 500 pounds of ore.

Clements believes the chief function of OTIS is to help reopen mines where the cost of access road construction out-weighs ore returns or, when mines are located in areas — such as parks — that would bring protests from environmentalists should a ground approach be used.

Soviet Gas Pact Delayed By U.S.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Conclusion of a $40-billion, 25-year pact to import Soviet natural gas into the United States will be delayed until the spring while the Nixon administration reviews whether it is needed, The Washington Post says today.

The pact was to have been signed this month.

The Post quotes high administration sources as saying both the government and the six U.S. companies promoting the prospective pact have cooled on the project.

Among the reasons are doubts that Siberian gas reserves are as large as the Russians say and the refusal of the Soviet government to permit independent testing of the deposits.

In addition, the Post sources say, there were second thoughts about the high cost of the Soviet gas—about $1.50 a 1,000 cubic feet compared with the current U.S. price of 20 cents a 1,000 cubic feet—and about the national security impact of excessive U.S. reliance on Soviet Union gas.

Six American companies announced Nov. 3 they expect to sign an agreement before the end of 1972 on construction of a pipeline from Siberia to Murmansk on the Barents Sea. Another pipeline was to link Siberia with the Pacific Coast.

RESERVES BIG

Natural gas is abundant in the Soviet Union and scarce in the United States, the world's largest consumer of the fuel. The Soviet Union has enough gas reserves to supply the U.S. for an estimated 30 years.

The administration hasn't ruled out Soviet gas imports, the Post source says, but cheaper gas may be obtained from Nigeria, Venezuela and other areas.

The undertaking would require an investment of nearly $13 billion in plants and pipelines in the Soviet Union and construction of tankers for shipments of liquefied gas. This would be made mainly by U.S. firms although Japanese companies have been debating for six years whether to co-operate in part of the development.

Tenneco Inc., Texas Eastern Transmission Corp. and Brown and Root Inc. are bidders on a plan to bring gas from Murmansk to the East Coast of the United States. The Tenneco triumvirate also is competing for permission to bring gas from Siberia by way of the Pacific to the U.S. West Coast with a combine made up of El Paso Natural Gas Co., Bechtel Corp., and Occidental Petroleum Corp.

U.S. officials were said to be still interested in the Murmansk project, which involves the plentiful gas fields of Tumen in Western Siberia, but to be suspicious of the prospects of deposits at Yakutsk which is projected to be connected by pipeline to the Soviet Pacific Coast.

FT. NELSON MAN HELD IN DEATH

FORT NELSON (CP) — Alan Cameron Thurbon, 49, of Fort Nelson has been charged with non-capital murder in the shooting death Sunday of Leo Giroux, 49, also of Fort Nelson.

Police said Giroux was killed and his wife was injured in the leg in a shooting at a motel in this northeastern British Columbia community early Sunday.

Police said they were shot at when they arrived at the scene and had to use a tear gas grenade to flush a suspect out of a motel room.

Thurbon appeared in court Sunday afternoon and was remanded 30 days for a psychiatric examination.

More Grist For Mill

SYDNEY, N.S. (CP) — Results of air pollution monitoring here show that the strike at the Sydney Steel Corp. plant in October cut back the city's air pollution drastically, but not enough to put the city within the range considered satisfactory in locations such as Ontario.

As a result, health officials are wondering what besides the steel mill is responsible for a pollution problem that gives dustfall readings in Sydney that are consistently among Canada's highest.

NO-ONE WAS HOME TO PROTESTERS

WEST VANCOUVER (CP) — About 20 protesters against the Vietnam war turned up to pay a Christmas Day visit to Prime Minister Trudeau at the residence of his father-in-law James Sinclair, but no one was home.

The protesters, who arrived at the Sinclair doorstep in pouring rain, had hoped to present a message to the prime minister asking him to personally urge United States President Richard Nixon to halt the U.S. bombing in North Vietnam.

The message also called for a "no-party vote of Conscience" on the issue when parliament reconvenes.

Protester Claire Culhane said the group was told by neighbors that the prime minister and his family were at Whistler Mountain, about 50 miles north of here, on a skiing holiday.

She said a member of the group would go to Whistler tomorrow in an attempt to locate the prime minister and present the message.

THIEF GAVE UP

TORONTO (CP) — Frustrated by a safe that was too tough, a burglar had to be satisfied with stealing a $40 radio.

The fact that he didn't get the money wasn't for lack of trying.

Police said the burglar, after breaking into a warehouse by smashing a window, tried to open the floor safe by using a chisel and drill on the dial.

Next, he tried to peel back the outer case with the chisel.

When that failed the burglar used a fork lift truck to move the safe against the outer wall.

He took a run at it with the truck, attempting to ram the forks through the safe.

Instead the wall gave way and all he did was push the safe through the hole.

The frustrated thief then left with the radio.

Their Dream Shattered Toronto Couple Home

TORONTO (CP) — Mr. and Mrs. James MacIntyre were back in Toronto Monday, with their Christmas plans of visiting relatives in Australia ruined.

They had planned to celebrate their golden wedding anniversary year with Mrs. MacIntyre's sister, Mrs. Bell Kennedy and her husband, who were wed about the same time as the MacIntyres. MacIntyre is 77 and his wife is 78. Mrs. MacIntyre has not seen her sister in 60 years.

But a week ago when they arrived in London, England, on the first step of their journey to Sydney, they were told their Toronto travel agent — Seaglair Canada Ltd. — had not forwarded the money to purchase tickets for the rest of the trip, by air to Singapore and by ship to Australia. They said they had paid the agency $2,100 in November for this purpose.

They said they were promised that the money would be wired to London but a week passed with no result. Saturday, a Seaglair official telephoned them from Toronto and said new arrangements might be made to complete their trip, but they said their extended stay in London had left them short of money.

The MacIntyres had to pay more than $400 to get back to Canada and had hardly enough money to get home from the airport.

"At our age, the cost of the trip is practically half our life savings," said MacIntyre. "We're going to see what Seaglair will give back to us.

"We checked with the Better Business Bureau before we made the final payment and they said there had been no complaints about Seaglair."

Aussies Cut Immigration

First Indian G-G Dies

MADRAS (Reuter) — Chakravarti Rajagopalachari, 94, first Indian governor-general after independence from Britain in 1947, died here Monday.

Rajaji, as he was usually known, was involved in Indian politics for more than 50 years and was actively writing a column in his journal Swarajya until a week before his death.

He succeeded Lord Mountbatten as governor-general in 1948.

A devoted follower of Mohandas Gandhi—he was sometimes called the keeper of his conscience — Rajaji differed with him seriously over the "Quit India" movement launched against the British in 1942.

Rajagopalachiari gave up a lucrative legal practice to join Gandhi in 1919 and was imprisoned five times by the British in the next 23 years. He was also founder of the right-wing Swatantra party.

A prominent member of the Indian National Congress, he was prime minister of Madras from 1937 to 1939.

After a break for a time with the Congress party, he was included in the interim government in 1946 and was appointed governor of West Bengal in August, 1947, at the height of the communal troubles which resulted from partition of the sub-continent into India and Pakistan.

After acting as governor-general for the two weeks in 1947, he took over the post when Lord Mountbatten left India in June, 1948, and held the position until India became a republic in January, 1950.

Our Pledge to You "WE WILL NOT BE UNDERSOLD"

BEFORE THE JUDGE

A 20-year-old man who pleaded not guilty to a charge of possession of MDA "to make a point" changed his plea because he didn't want "to waste a whole year in jail" trying to prove that point.

David Reed Lowther of Jordan River told the court Friday he had originally pleaded not guilty "to make a point and . . . tell you people . . . what's happening to me and my friends."

A month in custody at Wilkinson Road, said Lowther, had shown him not many people were interested in what he had to say.

Lowther had been unsuccessful in raising his $500 bail.

The case was transferred at the request of Ostler to the court section of Judge Harold Alder.

Alder accepted the plea of guilty and was told that seven caps of MDA were found in a coat lining when Lowther was stopped Nov. 24 on Langley.

The case was remanded to Jan. 5 for pre-sentence report and sentence.

Work . . . As They Like It

By HANNA NEUERBOURG

ZURICH, Switzerland (AP) — If her party breaks up well after midnight, secretary Roswitha Lohmann, 24, just shows up at her office an hour later than usual the next morning. Her boss greets her with a joke.

Kurt Wagner, 45-year-old quality controller, always leaves early in summer so he can work in his garden. His manager waves goodbye.

When the bus schedule changes, technician Franz Weber, 49, just advises the personnel office that starting next month he will change his work week.

All three—and several hundred thousand others—are benefitting from flexible work week arrangements that have become greatly popular in Switzerland ever since they were first imported from neighboring West Germany in 1969.

No official statistics exist but some experts believe that the work week "a la carte" or flexitime is more widely practised in Switzerland then in any other industrialized country.

"If I feel like it, I put the cover on my typewriter at 4 p.m. and go shopping," Mrs. Lohmann says. "Shops are not so crowded at this time.

"And if I want to stay in bed for another hour after a late night I do not have a bad conscience."

SCHEDULES VARY

Mrs. Lohmann works with a large company at Zug, near here, that offers the most radical variation of flexitime, the "sliding work schedule." Under this system, the employee can report to work any time between 6:30 and 8 a.m. take up to a 90-minute lunch hour 11:45 a.m. to 2 p.m. and leave between 4 and 6 p.m. during the five-day 44-hour week.

Also, the system allows employees to accumulate a surplus or deficit of up to 15 hours a month that has to be made up in the following month. Overtime is counted extra and has to be ordered by the management.

The flexitime arrangement leaves a daily block of almost six hours during which all employees are around at the same time.

"Once they have found their rhythm, employees tend to stick more or less to a certain schedule that seldom varies more than 10 minutes," said a personnel executive. "Anyway, we have never had havoc around here because of flexitime."

AVOID RUSH HOUR

Comments from workers and employers list multiple advantages of flexitime. For commuters it may mean less crowded trains, motorists may escape the rush hour trip, girls find it easier to get a date for a hairdo and fathers can take a daylight glimpse of their families.

Employment analysts say a prime achievement is the increased feeling of individual responsibility. Flexible work schedules "reaffirm the individuality" of employees, a study says.

Employers also note that flexitime often means a better use of capacities, a point of specific importance for Switzerland with its chronic labor shortage. Absenteeism also is reduced.

Subway Death

NEW YORK (AP) — A 26-year-old Irish national died under the wheels of a subway train when he was unable to free his foot from a closed door on the train as it pulled out of a Harlem station, the Transit Authority reported. The victim was identified as Frank Twomey of Cork City, County Cork, Ireland.

He Holds a Hot Hand

A pregnant woman holding the hand of a young child, a helicopter and a nurse with a hypodermic needle were just a few of the curious figurines created for Victorians last week by the skilled hands of glassblower John Highley.

Stationed in the Hillside Shopping Mall in the weeks before Christmas, Highley was never without a crowd of onlookers as his skilled hands flew through the motions of the ancient, but not forgotten art of glassblowing.

Highley made everything from sailboats to flowers to chipmunks and took requests for every imaginable kind of sculpture.

It took five years of training in the workshops of Europe before Highley perfected his trade.

"And I'm always learning new methods and new kinds of glass," Highley said.

The sample of Highley's work at the left is part of glassblowing called lampwork where the glass isn't actually blown but is molded with an oxy-propane flame at temperatures between 1,500 and 3,000 degrees.

Highley, who is a Jehovah Witness teacher, lives on a 40-foot boat with his wife, Heidi, and their 16-month-old son. They travel around the Gulf Islands doing missionary work most of the year and set up glassblowing workshops to earn just enough money to live on.

Their three-week workshop in Victoria attracted thousands of customers who crowded around to buy the inexpensive but unique Christmas gifts.

Highley said he and his wife will probably retire to their floating home now and set up their next workshop in the spring.

133-Man Force Adequate 'But We Can Use More'

By BRUCE OBEE
Times Staff

Victoria police department will never have enough officers to put one man on each street corner, says Chief John F. Gregory.

With the current 133 regular staff members the department is "adequately" staffed, but, "we can always use more men," said Gregory.

In 1971 Gregory applied to city council for five men. The application was granted and later rescinded "because the city wished to economize," he said.

In 1972 Victoria police strength was increased by three men.

"We go to budget with the police commission . . . and I endeavor to justify every penny that's in there," said Gregory.

To put one man on the street for 24 hours a day, seven days a week, it would cost taxpayers "in the vicinity of $45,000," he said. But that's not all wages — it would include holidays, medical plans, pension schemes and numerous other items.

GREGORY

The cost of one man on duty at all times is equivalent to that of 4.2 men, said Gregory.

One of the greatest assets to crime prevention is the "mere presence" of a policeman on the street, he said.

"Our police department is apprehending more criminals and laying more charges today than our courts can handle," said Gregory.

"There's absolutely no criticism here, in these remarks, of the judiciary. They are working under an adverse situation where their facilities aren't enough," he added.

Statistics provided by Victoria police records department show that between 1969 and 1971 the number of charges in criminal court increased 2.2 per cent while the number of reported criminal offences increased 61.3 per cent. During the same period police strength increased by 7.3 per cent.

A policeman's powers of arrest are stipulated in the Canadian Criminal Code.

"The public may feel that we can enforce the laws any way we want," said Gregory, "but we're hired to enforce the law within the law."

Although the Criminal Code is a creation of federal legislators, its enforcement relies heavily on the discretion of the arresting officer.

"Roadside suspension—there is legislation which is specifically reliant upon an individual police officer's discretion," said Gregory.

Two summers ago Gregory started a program of recruiting law students as summertime police constables. The program was established so prospective lawyers and elected public officials would have practical experience as backgrounds for their careers.

Gregory applied to the federal justice department to have the program instituted on a national basis. The application is currently under study and, if granted, the program could be established in 1973 or 1974.

"Despite our representations to the law-makers, the situation has not improved," said Gregory. The "gap" between the legislators and the law-enforcers is the reason.

Car Crash Cuts Power To Homes

A 22-year-old man escaped with minor injuries when his car was demolished during heavy rain in a one-car accident early today, Esquimalt police said.

Richard L. McCoid, 294 Helmcken, was driving west in the 1400-block Craigflower at 12:52 a.m. when he lost control of the vehicle. He smashed into a cement traffic island and collided with a power pole, knocking it over.

Several homes in the area were without power but it was restored by B.C. Hydro about an hour later, police said.

McCoid, alone at the time, was taken to Victoria General Hospital where he was treated and released.

Noelle Arrives Right on Cue

Like father, like daughter is the tradition in the family of Mr. and Mrs Arthur Noel Dodsworth of 2730 Musgrave.

Mrs. Dodsworth gave birth to a 6 pounds 11 ounce baby girl Christmas Day at 1:03 p.m.

She will be named Christine Noelle, because like her father, she was born on Dec. 25.

A spokesman at the Royal Jubilee Hospital said the baby's brother and sister, Stephen and Sharon, were delighted at the extra present.

The first baby born Monday, also at the Royal Jubilee, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Muldoon, 866 Goldstream.

To be named Jeffrey Alan, he weighs six pounds and arrived at 5:07 a.m.

The Muldoons also have a 16-month son, Jason.

Ask the Times

Q. I have been doing some research on the American playwright and novelist Thornton Wilder. I know that he was born in 1897 and that if he is still with us he would be around 75 years old. Could you tell me if he is, and if so, where is he presently living? Also, has he written anything since his novel The Eighth Day of 1967?

A. Reference books still list Wilder as alive, and list no works since The Eighth Day. Write him at 50 Deepwood Drive, New Haven, Conn., U.S.A.

Q. I have two coins. One has a five on the face and Ceskoslovenska—Socistic— Republica 1963; the other has a one on the face and Republica—Ceskoslovenska 1959. Could you tell me where they came from? C.S.

A. Czechoslovakia.

SHERRY BOTTLE was returned covered in traditional African leather weaving to Patrick Andrews of 1378 Lyall one and a half years after a seaman friend of his had thrown it into the Caribbean Sea with a message from Andrews in it. Massana Jawneh, a Gambian, found the bottle at a fishing village called Brufut, wove it into a souvenir of Africa and sent it back to Andrews, who said he was somewhat amazed and very pleased. COBRA LOSES HIS FANGS

SAIGON (AP) — The tough killer-cop they called The Cobra has become as gentle as a kitten.

Maj.-Gen. Nguyen Ngoc Loan, remembered by the world because of a famous photograph that showed him shooting a Viet Cong prisoner in a Saigon street, now spends his days on visits to orphanages and children's hospitals with candy and ice cream bought with money from his own pocket.

"Loan is a hopeless cripple himself. . . . He identifies with crippled kids," said an American doctor who has witnessed his visit at the centre where war victims and children with birth defects are fitted with braces and artificial limbs.

The scene is always the same Loan arrives unannounced in a three-jeep convoy loaded down with cases of soft drinks and boxes of candy and ice cream. He braces himself, and bent over his canes, he hobbles among the children while his aides distribute the goodies.

SHUNS REPORTERS

Still independent and furtive as in the day when he was chief of South Vietnam's national police and the powerful director of military security, Loan declines all interviews on his charity work and steadfastly refuses to have reporters or photographers accompany him on his hospital visits.

Loan as he made headlines (above) and today (right)

A Vietnamese nun with the Sisters of Charity, who watched him pick out the most deformed child in her ward to spoon ice cream to, thought perhaps the general was "lonely like that little girl. It's more than just the friendship of two crippled people; it's as if only they understand each other."

Fierce and shrewd, Loan got his nickname, the Cobra, for his swift, ruthless suppression of the 1966 Buddhist riots in Saigon, Hue and Da Nang which threatened to topple the regime of his close friend, then prime minister Nguyen Cao Ky.

His face, and that of the Viet Cong prisoner he killed at point-blank range with a revolver in the 1968 Tet offensive, became known through the Pulitzer Prize photo taken that February day by Associated Press photographer Eddie Adams.

SHOT BY SNIPERS

Three months later, Loan performed as an example to his men by moving forward alone, ahead of a tank, down an alley where Viet Cong snipers were holed up, on the outskirts of Saigon.

There was a burst of automatic weapons fire and Loan never walked upright again. He was carried from the alley.

For the next several years, Loan underwent repeated surgery for his damaged spine and crippled legs, including two operations at Washington's Walter Reed Hospital.

As his condition grew worse, friends revealed, Loan became moody and bitter.

Now saddled with his infirmities, the man who once was an air force general leading bombing raids has a title, an office and a make-work job in the Saigon defence ministry.

Sources in the ministry say the tough cop, now lives only for the kids on crutches and braces in the homes and hospitals.

Workers with Money to Burn

TORONTO (CP) — They have money to burn at the Toronto office of the Bank of Canada — $2 million in one recent week, in fact.

Four employees tossed the $2 million, all in $5 bills, into an incinerator without batting an eye.

But they're used to it, because the destruction of worn banknotes from all over Ontario is a commonplace activity at the office.

The facility serves as a superbank, handling money for more than 2,000 chartered bank branches across the province. Officials don't mind burning worn-out bills, but they don't like the idea of losing any of them.

Steel bars, reinforced concrete walls, massive vaults, bulletproof glass and quadruple combination locks are everywhere. Also shotgun, armed RCMP men stand guard in the lobby.

Officials of the bank say they burn about $7 million in old banknotes each month. Most are $1 and $2 bills, which wear out faster than larger bills because of their more frequent use.

The bills are placed in clear plastic bags and shoved into gas-fired furnaces.

All the burned-up money has to be replaced, so the bank issues crisp new currency to the Toronto head offices of chartered banks.

Convicts Keep Their Dinner

WALPOLE, Mass. (AP) — Christmas dinner was served as usual in the cafeteria at Walpole state prison, despite the proposal of some of the convicts that the food be given to the needy. The proposal came from a group of prisoners in one unit of the state's maximum security prison here, who said they'd fast so the turkey and fixings could be given away.

Historian Dies

ATHENS (AP) — Constantine Bastias, a leading journalist, writer and historian, died Tuesday of heart failure. He was 71.

No Love for Foreigners

MIGRANTS SHUNNED

BRUSSELS (AP) — Some eight million migrants have come up from the south, most of them with dark skins and little education. They take menial jobs at low pay, often live in slums, usually without family.

Police treat them harshly. Most people keep their distance.

They come from places where there are no jobs, sometimes backward economies, and when they return, some, at least, are mentally ill from their experience.

The foreign workers have spread through Western Europe in recent years. Most come from Mediterranean countries, lured by comparatively good wages. In Britain they come from Commonwealth countries to the south.

The color of their skins, their religions and their languages isolate them in a Europe only beginning to cope with prejudice. It was just last July, for instance, that a new French law went into effect forbidding cafe owners to refuse service to blacks.

In Belgium signs are still seen that say: "North Africans not wanted."

Occasionally European police stop a suspicious truck and find illegal immigrants herded into it by "labor contractors" who supply little food and no toilets.

Most migrants end up in large countries. About two million reside in France and another two million in West Germany. But they are sometimes more evident in the smaller, heavily industrialized countries.

Switzerland has about a million foreigners in a population of 6.5 million.

Two years ago the Swiss held a referendum on a constitution amendement that would have sent about a third of them home. It was narrowly defeated. Now another referendum has been proposed to cut the number of foreigners in half.

A large proportion of the foreign labor in Western Europe used to come into Italy. The number of Italians has dropped in recent years as European Common Market regulations made them more expensive to hire and as new factories went up in the traditional south Italian centres of labor.

Old colonial ties still play a part in the movement. Britain has a non-white population from Africa, the West Indies, the Indian subcontinent. It is being increased now by Asians driven from Uganda.

France has about 700,000 Algerians. In the 1950s, the Netherlands absorbed 150,000 Indonesians and has another 70,000 West Indians.

On the European continent most foreign labor now comes from Turkey, Greece, Yugoslavia, Spain and Portugal, as well as North Africa.

Who will stay and who will return is a vexing problem. Few immigrants to Britain have any intention of going back.

In West Germany it is estimated that 60 per cent of the foreign workers want to stay.

In France, the "Italian colony" numbers about 600,000, although by Italian figures there are only about 8,000 Italian workers left there.

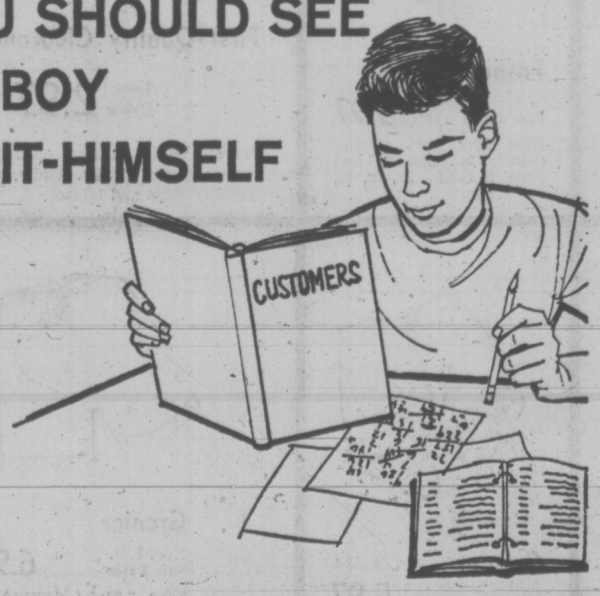
YOU SHOULD SEE MY BOY DO-IT-HIMSELF



When you talk about the do-it-yourself fellow, don't forget my son, Eddie. A year ago he was shy, unsure of himself, with nothing worthwhile to occupy his spare time, NOW you should see him. He has a newspaper route — a really thriving business of his own. He has developed confidence in himself and is accepting so many responsibilities that I nominate him as the most active do-it-yourselfer in the neighborhood. Here's what the young man does: Studies his paper and develops a sales message, sells new customers, serves regular customers, keeps route records, collects his monthly accounts giving each customer a signed receipt, budgets his time and profits, banks his money, pays his obligations by cheque, has plans for his savings in future education. He's a busy boy GOING PLACES with the opportunity to LEARN WHILE HE EARNS.

Old Stone-Face Really a Softie

NEW YORK (AP) — Interviewing Ed Sullivan is an unsettling experience. He's a compulsive lighter of other people's cigarettes. He lights people up in mid-question.

Another unnerving thing is that he's relaxed. You come expecting to chronicle a signal act from Mount Rushmore and instead find that his words come easily and that he's an easy-going guy.

He speaks his mind, but there must be an equal-time provision somewhere in the marriage contract with Sylvia, his wife of some 42 years. She speaks her mind, too.

When they're together — and they usually are at interviews — it produces a dialogue akin to that of Fibber McGee and Molly.

Ask him if the era of television's weekly variety show is over. Shows like the ones he did for CBS until June a year ago.

"I'd say yes," he says. "There were just too many of them. People got fed up with them. We tried every device, but . . . "

Then, as he warms to the subject, Sylvia has a thought.

"You know, Ed, I don't agree with you," she says. "There are so many people every place we go who say they miss a variety show. Everything now is movies."

Sullivan's weekly television show opened June 20, 1948. It was called Toast of the Town. How long would it last today?

"How long?" Sylvia echoed. "Twenty minutes."

Sullivan doubled up in laughter. "It would depend on what you've got," he finally said.

"Well," his wife said, "we've occasionally seen excerpts from some of those early shows and they were really horrible."

"I resent that," he sternly informed her and they laughed again.

At 70, Sullivan is getting ready to do three specials for CBS next year. He doesn't seem ready for Sun City yet and has no idea of retiring. Or of getting out of the scrivening business.

He started off about 52 years ago as a $10-a-week reporter for the Port Chester, N.Y., Daily Item. Eight newspapers later he's still writing.

He does two syndicated Broadway columns a week, down three from the number he did when his weekly television show was on. Five weekly columns and the show must have been murder, but Sullivan insists he thrived on it.

He does admit to having a severe case of the blues when the show finally was cancelled after 23 years on the air.

"I was very unhappy about being off the air," he said.

"You get accustomed to doing the show. And you form a lot of nice relationships with newspaper men around the country.

"When you're off the air, it's like being sentenced to the death chamber," he said.

"It's sort of like a newspaper where you're doing your column and all of the sudden the managing editor says, 'I've got news for you, boy. You're through,'" he said, laughing.

"No matter how little the prestige of being on a paper and writing a column and having a byline — well, it's exactly the same on television."

Sullivan grinned when asked if he ever would reach the point of actually retiring.

"Jeez, I hope not," he said.

Toys Spell Trouble

SEATTLE (AP) — Andrea Mangold has filled her shopping cart during the last two months in 13 stores where she's paid for hardly a thing.

Instead, two of the stores may have to pay fines for selling unsafe toys discovered on the shelves by Mrs. Mangold. A mother of three, she is an unpaid consumer deputy under a pilot program for the U.S. Food and Drug Administration.

Under the experiment, consumer volunteers in San Francisco, Chicago, Atlanta, Philadelphia and Seattle inspect stores to see if they're carrying any of some 800 toys banned as unsafe.

The Seattle office of the FDA said that, since the project was started Aug. 15, consumer deputies have checked 6,000 children's toys in 78 stores. One or more types of banned articles were found in 60 per cent of the stores, the FDA reported.

In a suburban discount house, Mrs. Mangold took less than an hour to fill her cart with toys she said could cause an infant to choke to death, seriously injure a baby's mouth or pinch and puncture a child's skin.

"Some of the managers will get down on their hands and knees checking toys with me," she said.

But that wasn't quite the case with two store managers who she said refused to remove the prohibited playthings. They will be visited by FDA inspectors and warned that continued sales of the offending items will be subject to action under the Hazardous Substances Act.

Mrs. Mangold said consumer deputies don't stop with the list of toys known to be dangerous.

"I continually find toys that aren't on the list but that I find potentially dangerous to a child," she said.

"I pull them off the shelves and show them to the manager. Some take them off, others won't. I pay for a toy like that and turn it over to the FDA for testing."

TWINS ON DECLINE

LONDON (Reuter) — A dramatic decline in the birth of non-identical twins in at least nine countries is puzzling British researchers.

Possible causes include hormones in food or pesticides, says Dr. William James, a research fellow at University College, London.

Dr. James stumbled across the startling figures while researching the mechanisms of twinning. He found that a rapid drop in the number of non-identical twins began in 1958-59 in Britain, Denmark, Australia, Belgium, Holland, Italy, New Zealand, Sweden and Switzerland.

A less-pronounced downward trend occurred in Portugal, Spain and Japan, he reported in the magazine Journal of Biosocial Science.

In Scotland, where the decline was most pronounced, births of non-identical twins have fallen by about one-third since the end of the 1950s.

For unknown reasons, births of identical twins have remained stable.

Identical twins are born when a fertilized egg divides in the womb. Non-identical twins result from two eggs being fertilized at the same time in the womb.

Ease Marks Success of Alcohol-Drug Plan

HOBBEMA, Alta. (CP)—The informality and ease with which Hobbema tribal counselling services conducts its alcohol and drug sessions might make an outsider wonder if anything is being accomplished.

But in view of the Indians' inborn reticence to discuss themselves, this informality and the ease with which they openly admit their faults at the twice-a-week gatherings is a measure of the program's success.

The program, funded 80 per cent by the department of Indian affairs and the remainder by the Hobbema Four-Band Enterprises, was started in 1971 as a result of the number of deaths, accidents and crimes related to the consumption of alcohol.

In 1971 1,047 Indians from Hobbema, 50 miles south of Edmonton, were jailed overnight under the Liquor Control Act. Last September 156 were jailed overnight.

At least half of the males of the reserve's more than 3,000 population suffer from drinking problems, said Russell Smith, tribal services counsellor.

"Unemployment is one of the major contributing factors," he said.

"The lack of facilities for cultural and sporting activities also makes it difficult to offer alternatives for the people."

Sessions are held on the reserve and four Indian counsellors are involved in the program.

One of the counsellors, Mary Bull, pointed to an elderly man and said he had lost the respect of young people on the reserve because of his drinking.

"He wants to get it back and be able to help keep them from doing the same thing," Mrs. Bull said.

"He was very shy at first like most of them are, but now he stands up and talks all the time."

Another participant, a mother of eight chillren, said she attempted to speak to clergymen and doctors about her alcohol problem "but it didn't do any good."

"I used to be all bottled up inside and just didn't trust anybody," she said.

"I felt so alone. My children never came to me with their problems because I was such a cranky old witch.

"I've been coming here now for three months. Just talking and listening to others has helped me to understand about the downfalls I've had . . ."

Mr. Smith hopes to add a youth counsellor to the program to deal with the drug problem on the reserve.

Nayda Sang Requiem Past

NORDEGG, Alta. (CP) — The night they finished building the Bighorn Dam, Nayda Hallett got a little drunk, sang a few bawdy songs and cursed a lot.

That in itself wasn't unusual. But the songs that night seemed something of a requiem for a way of life, with Nayda in the role of Alberta's past and the Bighorn Dam playing the part of its future.

Nayda is a legend in the mountainous area west of Nordegg where her line camps can be found scattered throughout the countryside. The camps were established during the years to provide shelter for the hunting and fishing parties she guides.

The 29-year-old cigarette smoker can outhunt, outfish, outwrangle and outshoot most men. She knows the mountains and streams as well as she knows the back of her hand.

Nayda virtually guarantees success for hunters who are after elk and moose. And at least one of every two hunters she leads will come out with a bighorn sheep.

She has lived all her life in the Rockies and knows only the life of an outfitter and guide, having learned the trade from her father, Roy Miller, who was an outfitter in the Crowsnest pass.

MARRIAGE BROKE UP

"I never had much of an education," she said. "And besides, my dad always wanted sons. He ended up with two daughters and so it was only natural one of us always tagged along with dad."

Nayda tried her hand at marriage and bore two children. But the marriage failed, so she struck out on her own with daughter Deserree.

She owns a mobile trailer and home is "where I hang my hat tonight."

"We're poor people, having to put everything we earn back into the business," Nayda said. "But it's a good, clean existence and we can do and say what we want.

"I only know one vocabulary. I'm not very good at telling people off in fancy words, but they get the message.

"If I had my life to live all over again, I'd probably do the same thing . . . unless I could find some real rich person and hogtie him.

"But I'd rather Deserree find somebody rich. . . . This is just too rugged a life, especially in the winter."

For recreation, Nayda fishes.

Rheumatism is beginning to catch up to her, but she plans to carry on the rugged life "as long as I can—whether it's another year or another 30."

Vadex Firm Told to Halt Distribution

OTTAWA (CP) — An order to halt the distribution of Vadex, a brand of one of the minor tranquilizers, has been directed towards its manufacturer and not retail outlets selling it, a health department official said Monday.

Dr. A. B. Morrison, assistant deputy minister in charge of the health protection branch said only Laboratorie Vade Mecum of Montreal has been ordered to stop distribution of its brand of chlordiazepoxide "at this stage." The drug was reported to still be on sale in Montreal drug stores.

Noting that distribution of Vadex is mainly in the Montreal area, Dr. Morrison said the company had not provided the department with requested data on bioavailability—a test on the amounts of a drug absorbed and carried in the blood.

The department ordered distribution of the drug by its manufacturer halted by invoking a relatively new regulation under the Food and Drug Act, which allows the government to demand a company prove its product is safe and effective should the government have reason to suspect that it may not be.

FIGHT INFLATION WITH Kmart DISCOUNTS

Latter-Day Pioneers Need Bankroll to Get Start

TORONTO (CP) — Nowadays it takes money to live like a pioneer, and skills few people have had to develop.

H. F. Crown says he gets letters, many of them from the United States, from people who want to drop out of city life and try settlement farming in Northern Ontario.

"It's not a way of life anybody should be encouraged to get into when they have no resources and no knowledge of agriculture. Lack of knowledge is probably the greater hazard."

Mr. Crown is director of the Agricultural Rehabilitation and Development Administration (ARDA) in the Ontario department of agriculture. It helps existing commercial farmers to expand. It may help a marginal farmer to find some other way to live.

"We don't assist people to become farmers," he said in an interview. "Every report that has looked into the matter projects a smaller number of full-time commercial farmers by 1980. In Ontario there will be about 40,000 as opposed to 70,000 to 75,000 now."

He said a few people do run small family farms, but only with the aid of part-time paying jobs or full-time jobs in the city.

"These people do have a point.

"But settlement agriculture isn't feasible now. The taxes and services that you have to help put up as a citizen cost you dollars now.

"In the early settlement days the settler had to do his share of road labor. The school teacher lived in someone's home and often took his pay in kind.

"In the 20th century our social and economic structure is different."

Mr. Crown said some of the inquiries he gets are the result of advertised tax sales of land at $10 to $20 an acre.

"I suppose it must seem like a bargain. There are seldom road and hydro and basic services available.

"The better quality agricultural land that has a high productive capacity is in pretty high demand, so what is on sale may be stoney, lighter soil.

EXAMINE THE LAND

"Our advice to these people is to see the kind of land and talk to the district agricultural representative.

"Then they should know how much land they want and how much capital they've got to put in stock and equipment. If they have under $10,000 in liquid assets or ability to borrow, they had better forget about it.

"The $10,000 wouldn't pay for the farm, you'd have to have at least that to stock and equip it."

Mr. Crown said a milk cow costs about $350 to $400. He estimated 35 or 40 hens would be needed to keep a family in eggs plus an occasional chicken dinner.

"We see a lot of pioneer villages, and we get carried away, thinking isn't this a wonderful way to live.

"But when the older farmers talk about the old days on the farm, they talk about the strenuous manual labor and no amenities, and they don't want to go back."

Minerva Awaits Notice

ORANGE, Calif. (AP)—The president of the Republic of Minerva (current population: Zero; elevation: -3 at high tide) says the world will soon sit up and take notice of the "newest and smallest nation on earth."

But for now, Morris C. (Bud) Davis, 46, conducts Minerva affairs of state from the provisional capital—his living room in this Los Angeles suburb.

He has never seen Minerva, which consists of two coral reefs lying near the Tropic of Capricorn, underwater most of the time. Minerva, named after the Greek goddess, is 900 miles north of Auckland, New Zealand and 260 miles south of the capital of Tonga.

Davis says he plans to visit Minerva next summer, but right now he is concentrating on averting a war with neighboring Tonga, which claims the territory.

North Minerva is a circular atoll 4½ miles in diameter. South Minerva, which is 17 miles away, is a coral outcropping in the shape of a figure eight, about 3½ miles wide and eight miles long. At low tide, the reefs thrust three feet above the water. At high tide, they disappear.

Davis, who formerly was an electronic engineer, is president of a company called Caribbean - Pacific Enterpris- which was formed for the specific purpose of establishing a new nation somewhere.

There are seven stockholders with a total investment of $250,000 in the project, Davis said in an interview.

REEFS NOT CLAIMED

"We figured we really couldn't straighten out our own country," so we would start over someplace new. We searched through history books, libraries and nautical charts for any place in the world that was unclaimed."

The group could find only two unclaimed places, Minerva and Conway Reef off the coast of Australia, which has since been claimed by Australia.

Minerva was surveyed by Capt. H. M. Denham of the Royal Navy in 1854. But the reefs apparently were unclaimed.

On Jan. 16 of this year, two members of Caribbean-Pacific Enterprises and three crew members set sail from Fiji for a two-day, 380-mile voyage to the reefs.

Once there, they laid claim to the reefs in the name of the Republic of Minerva and raised the Minervan flag—a gold torch of liberty on a blue (for the sea) background which was designed by Davis.

TO DREDGE LAGOONS

But King Tupou IV of Tonga, general of the 100-man Tonga defence force, led an expeditionary band accompanied by Tonga police in June and declared Tongan sovereignty over the reefs.

Davis said the Republic of Minerva plans to negotiate with the king. "We certainly don't want to go to war over it." Davis would not say, however, if he is prepared to go to war if necessary.

Meanwhile, Caribbean-Pacific Enterprises plans to start work on a major landfill operation next April.

"We hope to dredge sand in the lagoons and build a 1,000- to 2,000-foot-wide, 10- to 15-foot high surface on which to locate our country," Davis said.

He said Minerva could hold a population of 250,000 using the concept of a "sea city"—a large outer shell built on pilings—although the president admits that "it would be rather cramped."

Crash Victim 'Poor'

A 23-year-old crewman from HMCS Terra Nova, injured in a crash on Esquimalt Road Friday night, is in poor condition in Victoria General Hospital.

Kenneth Derrick Green, a passenger in a car driven by fellow crewman Douglas Wayne McRae, 19, received internal injuries. The car was demolished, Esquimalt police said.

The vehicle hit a parked car then struck a utility pole, police said.

Rough Rides on Road to Super Bowl

By The Associated Press

The road to the Super Bowl now leads through the cities of Washington and Pittsburgh after a couple of sharp turns.

In fact, there was only one smooth ride in the first round of the National Football League playoffs over the holiday weekend.

"We're ready for the Dallas Cowboys," said Washington quarterback Billy Kilmer after directing a 16-3 Redskins' victory over Green Bay Packers Sunday in the only playoff game without last-minute excitement.

The Cowboys were involved in one of the three cliff hanger finishes, beating San Francisco '49ers 30-28 with two touchdowns in the last two minutes of play Saturday.

The other survivors who'll play next Sunday in the second round, Pittsburgh Steelers and Miami Dolphins, also served up a healthy portion of dramatics in their victories.

The Steelers won their game against Oakland Raiders 13-7 Saturday with a freak pass-deflection play in the last five seconds.

The Dolphins' victory was no freak, though. Earl Morrall directed an 80-yard touchdown drive, then Jim Kiick powered over for the winning score from the six with less than five minutes remaining, clinching a 20-14 victory over Cleveland Browns.

"Everything was laid out in front of us with eight minutes to go," said Miami coach Don Shula. "We had to score a touchdown and we did what we had to do."

The Dolphins did something this year that no one else did — won 14 games in a row en route to the championship of the American Football Conference East.

The upstart Browns halted the Dolphins' strong running game and even took a 14-13 lead in the second half on Mike Phipps' touchdown pass before Morrall and Kiick took over.

"The best thing for us was to get behind," said Larry Csonka, one of the Dolphins' powerhouse runners. "It got very quiet and somebody said: 'If we're gonna get anything done, now's the time to do it.' It got done."

I'm glad I had the opportunity to redeem myself," said Kiick, who spent most of the season in the shadow of Miami's 1,000-yard aces, Csonka and Mercury Morris.

In Pittsburgh, the AFC's Central Division champs appeared beaten by Oakland. The Raiders, champions in the AFC West, had a 7-6 lead on a late 30-yard scramble by Ken Stabler.

But with five seconds remaining and Pittsburgh down to its last chance, quarterback Terry Bradshaw threw a desperation pass that was deflected by receiver John Fuqua and Oakland defender Jack Tatum.

The back-spinning football floated into the arms of Franco Harris, and the Steelers' rookie took it 42 yards for the game-winning touchdown that triggered happy hysterics at Three Rivers Stadium.

"Unbelievable," said Pittsburgh coach Chuck Noll. "Somebody has liked us well enough all season to let things go our way."

"I guess you could say it was a little bit of luck and God was with us and everything like that," said Harris. "When you have a feeling that this could be the last play of the season and that you could blow it, then that one more chance pulls it through for you. "Beautiful!"

"When we scored my brain was gone," said Pittsburgh guard Bruce Van Dyke. "I couldn't believe it."

Dallas trailed 28-13 with 16 minutes remaining when the NFC's wild-card team came back and beat San Francisco, the NFC West champ. Quarterback Roger Staubach, last year's Super Bowl hero, came off the bench in the last two minutes and threw a pair of touchdown passes.

"It was the best comeback I've ever seen a Dallas team make," said Cowboy coach Tom Landry. "We just had to put everything together and we did."

Washington's famed Over-The-Hill-Gang Defence stopped cold Sunday. The Redskins, winners of the NFC East, never had an anxious moment with the Packers, who won the NFC's Central crown.

In next Sunday's action, the Redskins and Cowboys will contend for the National Football Conference title at Washington and the Dolphins and Steelers in Pittsburgh for the American.

'SKINS, DOLPHINS FAVORED

LAKE TAHOE, Nev. (AP)— Harrah's Tahoe Racebook made Miami Dolphins and Washington Redskins favorites Monday to win their respective National Football League conference championships.

The Dolphins were listed as 2½-point favorites over Pittsburgh Steelers for the Amerian Conference title.

The Redskins were listed as 3½-point favorites to defeat Dallas Cowboys in the National Conference.

Owner Missed the Big Play

TELLING HOW he missed most important play in 40-year history of Pittsburgh Steelers is Art Rooney. The 71-year-old Pittsburgh owner was on his way to locker room when Steelers scored on tipped pass play with seconds remaining to beat Oakland Raiders 13-7 and earn berth in American Football Conference final against Miami Dolphins. DOUG PEDEN - EDITOR

PITTSBURGH (AP) — It was the most miraculous play in Pittsburgh Steeler history, and Art Rooney didn't see it.

The 71-year-old team owner left his private box in the waning seconds Saturday with Pittsburgh trailing Oakland Raiders 7-6 and facing a seemingly hopeless fourth-down situation.

"I figured we had lost, and I wanted to get to the locker room early so I could personally thank the players for the fine job they'd done all season," said Rooney, who waited four decades for the Steelers' first division title in the National Football League.

"I was standing by the elevator when one of the stadium guards came running at me yelling, 'You won it. You won it,' " he added. "I asked him if he was kidding and he screamed, 'No, no. Listen to the crowd!' "

The crowd was indeed in a state of frenzy after watching a one-in-a-million touchdown play that Pittsburgh a 13-7 playoff win over the Raiders and sent the Steelers into the American Football Conference title game against Miami Dolphins.

Faced with fourth-and-10 on the Steeler 40-yard line, quarterback Terry Bradshaw had drilled a pass about 30 yards downfield to Frenchy Fuqua.

Raider defensive back Jack Tatum knocked the ball away from Fuqua and it shot 10 yards backward, where Franco Harris made a shoestring catch and raced 42 yards for a touchdown.

"I heard all the shouting and cheering, but I still wasn't sure what happened," said Rooney.

Rooney was unaware that hundreds of ecstatic Steeler fans had swarmed onto the field and that five seconds remained on the clock.

What's more, the Raiders were vehemently objecting to the touchdown, claiming that Tatum had not touched the ball and therefore it was an illegal pass, touched by two offensive receivers.

Did the Ref Need Rerun?

OAKLAND (AP) — Coach John Madden of Oakland Raiders, whose Super-Bowl hopes were dashed by a freak last-minute play, says he is convinced officials relied on a videotape instant replay to make the game-deciding call in the Raiders' National Football League playoff game against Pittsburgh Steelers Saturday.

The officials ruled that defensive halfback Jack Tatum of the Raiders had deflected a pass intended for Steeler receiver John Fuqua, thus allowing Franco Harris, who wound up with the ball, to run 42 yards for a touchdown with five seconds left that gave the Steelers a 13-7 triumph.

Madden said he is certain Tatum never made contact with the ball and the pass should have been ruled incomplete because two consecutive offensive players touched it. But he said he was even angrier at how the call was made.

"The officials on the field told me they didn't know what happened and they were going to check upstairs to see what it was," Madden said.

"The referee (Fred Swearingen) went in to use the dugout telephone and when he came out he called it a touchdown."

Madden said Swearingen called a press box equipped with closed-circuit television where top NFL officials, including executive director Jim Kensil and supervisor of officials Art McNally, were watching the playoff contest.

Kensil acknowledged the phone call, but said Swearingen merely was informing them of the decision. The NFL says its officials do not use videotape to decide plays.

"There was no decision from the press box, and television replay was not used in making the decision," Kensil said.

Madden said he saw McNally at the airport and "he told me that there was no doubt Tatum touched the ball. But then I saw Jay Randolph of NBC television and he told me there was no way to make a positive decision off the TV replay. Those are the films McNally saw."

Madden said he spent Christmas Eve studying the game films and was sure that Tatum had hit Fuqua from behind so that the ball recocheted off the Steeler receiver into Harris' arms.

"But there was no way they were going to call it any other way with all those people out on the field. Somebody would have been killed," Madden said.

WEARING KNOWING grin while watching Sunday morning retransmission of game is Pittsburgh head coach Chuck Noll, who guided Steelers to victory over Oakland Raiders Saturday to collect berth in American Football Conference final scheduled New Year's eve. (AP Wirephoto)

Kareem Loses Out But Bucks Triumph

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Kareem Abdul-Jabbar lost a battle but Milwaukee Bucks won the war.

And because of their 104-99 National Basketball Association victory over Kansas City-Omaha Kings Monday night, the Bucks took some precious ground in the Midwest race.

Abdul-Jabbar, usually second to no man in the struggle for rebounds, was beaten 14-13 on the boards by the Kings' Sam Lacey, but had a game-high 32 points, including 13 in the final quarter that helped seal the triumph.

The victory, coupled with Chicago's 115-108 loss to Phoenix Suns, lifted Milwaukee's lead over the Bulls to 4½ games in the Midwest Division.

In the other games Monday night, New York Knicks beat Detroit Pistons 113-110 and Portland Trail Blazers stopped Seattle Super-Sonics 116-113.

No games were scheduled Sunday night, but Saturday's scores were: Atlanta Hawks 124, Philadelphia '76ers 112; Baltimore Bullets 104, Detroiit 97; Milwaukee 104, Boston Celtics 98 and Golden State Warriors 127, Chicago 109.

Three-point plays by Abdul-Jabbar and Jon McGlocklin in the final 35 seconds of the third period put Milwaukee in front of Kansas City-Omaha to stay.

Nate Archibald of the Kings scored 20 points and contributed 18 assists to their attack.

Centre Neal Walk made a three-point play and a foul shot and grabbed a key rebound in the last five minutes of play to spark Phoenix over Chicago.

New York built a big lead behind the scoring of Bill Bradley, Dave DeBusschere and Walt Frazier, then survived a 40-point fourth quarter by Chicago to beat the Bulls.

Sidney Wicks and Geoff Petrie combined for 66 points to lead Portland over Seattle.

Court Battle Is Won By Blackout Backers

WASHINGTON (AP) — There was no home television coverage of the Washington Redskins-Green Bay Packers football game Sunday, even though Robin Ficker battled the television ban all the way to the Supreme court.

Ficker, of nearby Silver Spring, Md., even asked the court to delay the National Football League playoff game, if necessary, to hear his case.

But he said that two hours before game time he was notified by a court employee that Chief Justice Warren E. Burger, acting for the court, refused to hear the case.

Ficker's last-minute appeal was carried to Burger's home by limousine, Ficker said.

Ficker's case previously was rejected by U.S. District Court and the Circuit Court of Appeals. He sought action to force the NFL to back down from its ban on local television coverage.

President Nixon also had brought pressure to seek Washington television coverage for the game, which was a sellout at RFK Stadium.

NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle rejected the presidential appeal, contending that the local blackouts are necessary to protect over-all box-office sales.

Fourth-Quarter Score Gives North Victory

MIAMI (AP) — Arizona speedster Bob McCall raced 13 yards for a touchdown in the fourth quarter Monday night and gave the North All-Stars a 17-10 victory over the South in the annual Shrine charity football game in the Orange Bowl.

McCall's run off the left side came on a third-down-and-10 situation with the score tied 10-10. The North had tied the score earlier in the quarter on a two-yard run by Rufus Ferguson of Wisconsin, named outstanding player for his team.

TEMPE, Ariz. (AP) — Arizona State University, led by All-America halfback Woody Green's four touchdowns, plowed over Missouri Tigers 49-35 to capture the second annual Fiesta Bowl Saturday night before a record crowd of 51,000.

Green, named the game's most valuable offensive player, wound up with 202 yards rushing for the evening as Sun Devils rolled up 718 yards total offence.

Green scored Sun Devils' first two touchdowns in the first quarter from two yards and 12 yards out. He also had a 17-yard scoring play in the second quarter and in the final period ran 21 yards for his final touchdown.

Defensive halfback Mike Fink of Missouri, who scored a touchdown on a 100-yard kickoff return, was named the game's outstanding defensive player.

Shutout Earns A Yule Bonus

By The Canadian Press

A Merry Christmas to Emile Francis, general manager-coach of New York Rangers, was a 5-0 shutout of Detroit Red Wings.

The win Sunday night, supported by Ed Giacomin's 40th career shutout to tie a club record set by Davey Kerr, moved New York to within two points of second-place Boston Bruins in the National Hockey League's East Division.

And while the Rangers went home to celebrate Christmas Eve on the east coast, Serge Bernier gave the Kings a little holiday cheer by scoring four goals in a 5-3 Los Angeles win over California Golden Seals on the west coast.

In the only other Christmas Eve contest, Chicago Black Hawks salvaged a weekend split with Toronto, winning 5-1 after losing 5-3 to the Maple Leafs in Toronto on Saturday.

Elsewhere Saturday the scores were: Detroit 5, Vancouver Canucks 1; Boston 3, Atlanta 1; New York Islanders 4, Minnesota North Stars 2; Montreal Canadiens 6, Pittsburgh Penguins 3; St. Louis Blues 6, Philadelphia Flyers 1 and Los Angeles 2, Buffalo Sabres 0.

Five Rangers shared in the scoring at New York with defenceman Brad Park and rookie forward Steve Vickers back in the lineup.

As the Rangers left the ice, Giacomin was greeted by a "Merry Christmas" from coach Francis and a $100 bonus.

But it was the two returnees —Park and Vickers— who drew the loudest cheers from 17,500 Madison Square Garden fans.

"Oh, it makes a lot of difference to us with Brad in there," Francis admitted of the appearance of his all-star defenceman. "There's no doubt about it. He's our leader. He makes everybody go."

Bernier not only scored four goals at Oakland, he also took part in the second of two third period fights, engaging Ted McAneely in a scrap. The first featured Kings' rookie Don Kozak and rugged Bob Stewart.

Dennis Hull's two goals led the Black Hawks over Toronto in a spirited game at Chicago Stadium. Both teams were tired after meeting for the second time in 18 hours and an all night bus trip.

The Hawks had more reason to be tired. They had bussed to make the game in Toronto Saturday after fog closed down the airport and returned to Chicago via the same accommodation.

Boston stayed within a point of Montreal in the East Saturday, Mike Walton's 19th of the season sealing the win over Atlanta.

Frank Mahovlich and Guy Lapointe scored two each to lead Montreal over Pittsburgh; Paul Henderson's two goals led Toronto against West Division leading Chicago; veteran goalie Roy Edwards sparked Detroit's victory over Vancouver; Brian Spencer broke a 2-2 deadlock as the Islanders registered their fourth win of the season; goals by Kings' Mike Corrigan and Ralph Backstrom dealt the Sabres their second straight loss; St. Louis took a 6-0 lead before Bill Flett ended rookie Wayne Stephenson's shutout with 17 seconds left in the game.

SKATING BEHIND NET to grab puck is Chicago Black Hawks' goalie Tony Esposito (35) during National Hockey League action Sunday. Following in hot pursuit are clubmate Keith Magnuson (3) and Rick Kehoe (17) of Toronto Maple Leafs. Chicago won the home game, 5-1.

Blazers' Bernie Has Goaltending Blues

By The Canadian Press

It doesn't make much difference what stage of the game Bernie Parent gets to play lately, he seems to be a well beaten goaltender.

The one-time ace of Toronto Maple Leafs' National Hockey League franchise, now toiling with Philadelphia Blazers of the rival World Hockey Association, came in on relief Monday night against Cleveland Crusaders.

He was beaten for five goals in two periods as the Crusaders stretched their 3-0 lead into an 8-0 victory to keep pace with the Eastern Division-leading New England Whalers, 8-2 victors over New York Raiders.

In the only other game, Chicago Cougars stretched their home-ice victory string to four games, edging Alberta Oilers 3-2.

Larry Pleau's three goals went for nought Sunday when the Whalers lost 5-3 to Los Angeles Sharks while Ottawa Nationals trounced Quebec Les Nordiques 6-2.

A scheduled Houston Aeros-Minnesota Fighting Saints game Sunday was rescheduled a month ago. WHA spokesmen in New York did not give a reason for the change.

Saturday's scores were: Chicago 3, Alberta 2; Cleveland 3, Minnesota 1; Houston 7, Philadelphia 3; Quebec 2, Los Angeles 1.

Parent, offered a multi-year contract with an estimated value of $750,000 to jump to the Blazers, has not been one of the spirited movers of the club, last in the east with 24 points.

Even before Monday's game he sported the worst record in the WHA among regular goaltenders, giving up an average of 4.92 goals a game.

The Crusaders built their early lead against veteran Marcel Paille, who in the past has been called on often to relieve Parent. They shelled Parent with 35 shots — 19 in the second.

Paul Andrea's two first-period goals got the Crusaders started followed by Bob Dillabough, with Cleveland a man short, Gerry Pinder, Gary Jarrett, Joe Hardy, Grant Erickson and Ted Hodgson.

Cleveland goalie Gerry Cheevers registered his fourth shutout of the season and improved on his league-leading goals against average of 2.36 going into the game played before 1,517 at Cleveland.

It was no contest at New York after John French, Terry Caffery and Kevin Ahearn tallied for the Whalers within a 2½-minute span in the first period to offset a 1-0 Raider lead on Bobby Sheehan's score at the 3:17 mark.

Tom Webster caught New York's Ron Ward in the WHA's goal-scoring race, registering his 27th and 28th in the second period to set the departure of Raiders' goalie Pete Donnelly in front of 4,449 New Yorkers.

Tim Sheehy, Brit Selby and John Danby completed the Whalers' rout on substitute Ian Wilkie. Craig Reichmuth added the second New York goal in the third period.

Rosaire Paiement, with a goal and an assist, led Chicago's win before 2,862 home fans. He opened the Chicago scoring then engineered the winner by Reg Fleming. Larry Mavety built the Cougar lead to 2-0 in the second period.

Rusty Patendaude and Al Hamilton tallied for the Albertans, among the early season favorites to capture Western Division laurels who have fallen on evil days in recent weeks.

SANDERSON REPORTED RETURNING TO BRUINS

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Centre Derek Sanderson, who jumped from Boston of the National Hockey League to the Philadelphia Blazers of the new World Hockey Association, will be back with the Bruins within 30 days, Minneapolis Tribune columnist Sid Hartman said Sunday.

Hartman says Sanderson received a $600,000 advance to sign with Philadelphia, but the Blazers are trying to get out of their remaining $2-million contract by claiming that he never was in condition to play.

Sanderson, who is unhappy playing in the WHA, is willing to settle the contract, The Tribune sports editor writes.

He adds that Sanderson has refused to play with New York Raiders of the WHA and wants to return to the Bruins.

Soviets Hammer Seattle Totems

SEATTLE (AP) — The Western Hockey League Seattle Totems battled the touring Russian national champions on even terms through two periods Monday night but couldn't keep up the pace in the third period and dropped a 9-4 decision to the Soviet team.

The Russians got off to a fast start in what looked like a romp and led the Totems 3-0 after the first 10 minutes of the game. But the surprising Totems then picked up two goals and left the ice at the end of the period trailing 3-2.

Russia scored first in the second period but the Totems picked up two goals in 56 seconds to tie the score at 4-4. The Soviets scored at 17:06 in the second period and then picked up four goals in the final frame.

The fourth-quarter burst by the visitors was led by Aleksandr Yakushev, who scored three goals and was credited with one assist. Two of the goals came in the final period.

GOLF EVENT WASHED OUT

The 19th annual Christmas Tree golf tournament scheduled today at Uplands has been cancelled.

Monday's rainstorm left much of the course flooded and several greens unplayable.

England Upsets India

NEW DELHI (Reuter) — England captain Tony Lewis guided his team to an exciting Christmas Day victory over India in the first test at the Kotla ground here Monday.

Lewis, making his test debut, was 70 not out when England won by six wickets five minutes after lunch on the fifth and final day. It was the first England test victory in India in 20 years and the first time England had won in New Delhi.

The win for England avenged its defeat by India at the Oval last year.

At the start of play Monday, England was 106 for three and needed another 101 runs for victory. India desperately needed a quick breakthrough and achieved it with the fourth ball of the day when Bishen Singh Bedi dismissed Barry Wood.

England then was 107 for four and the slight advantage it had held overnight had slipped India's way. But Lewis and Tony Greig stayed together for the rest of the match, sharing an unbroken stand of 101.

England's final total was 208 for four and Lewis remained undefeated after batting for 163 minutes. Greig, who hit the winning runs when he drove Dilip Sardesai for four, finished with 40, not out.

Forrester Saves Face For United

Tom Forrester saved Victoria West-United from embarrassment Saturday.

West-United, of the Pacific Coast Soccer League, needed two goals by Forrester in the second half for a 4-2 exhibition victory over a combined team from two Victoria West sides in the Victoria District League at Topaz Park.

West-United went in front, 2-0, on first-half goals by Mike Sails and Stu Taylor, but the District League team tied the score early in the second half on goals by Ralph Anderson and Barry Robbins.

Clipper Coach Fires Himself

By The Canadian Press

Boston Braves defeated New Haven Nighthawks 3-1 to regain second place in the Eastern Division of the American Hockey League Monday, while in the west, Virginia Red Wings tumbled the division-leading Cincinnati Swords 4-0. In the only other game, Providence Reds defeated Springfield Kings 5-1.

In off-ice action, general manager Terry Reardon stepped down as coach of Baltimore Clippers and named veteran defenceman Jim Morrison to replace him.

The move came after Baltimore's 5-2 loss to Hershey Bears Saturday left the club at the bottom of the heap in the west with a 5-19-7 record.

In other games Saturday, Cincinnati defeated Rochestter Americans 8-2, Nova Scotia Voyageurs beat Cleveland Barons 6-1, Springfield defeated Boston 6-4 and Virginia topped New Haven 6-4.

Reardon, who guided the Clippers to the western division title in the past two seasons, said he was disappointed and thought the team was "capable of doing much better."

"As a result," Reardon said, "I have decided to change coaches. I hope Jim can motivate them."

Morrison, 41, is in his third season with the Clippers. During a career that started in 1951, he played in the National Hockey League with Toronto, Boston, Detroit, Pittsburgh and New York Rangers.

The Braves, now two points behind Nova Scotia and two ahead of Rochester, struck for three goals within two minutes and 43 seconds of the second period to beat the Nighthawks, after Willie O'Ree had put New Haven ahead. The Boston goalgetters were Richie Leduc, Steve Stirling and Mat Ravlich.

The Red Wings snapped the Swords' 13-game unbeaten streak on two goals each by Robbie Ftorek and Brian McCutcheon. Doug Grant turned aside 29 Cincinnati shots for the shutout.

The Reds exhibited a diversified attack as five different players scored against the Kings. The snipers were Doug Keeler, Billy Heindl, Bill Knibbs, Gerry Teeple and Andre Peleffy. Wayne Chernecki supplied Springfield's only goal in the second period.

Title Won By Soviets

MOSCOW (Reuter) — The Soviet Union's national hockey team won the Izvestia Trophy Saturday be defeating Czechoslovakia, the world titleholder, 8-4, in the final of a week-long international tournament.

The Russians won their four games in the five-team, single-round-robin tournament, outscoring the opposition 34-10.

Czechoslovakia and Sweden each had one win, two ties and one loss, but the Czechs were second on a superior goal spread. Finland was fourth with one victory, one tie and two losses. Poland brought up the rear with one tie and three losses.

Money Crisis Spawns New Car Race Rule

PARIS (Reuter) — Next year's world motor racing championship will be opened to cars of differing specifications if there are not enough Formula I entries, it has been decided here.

Officials of the Commission Sportive Internationale (CSI), motor sport's world controlling body, took the decision following a dispute between Europe's Grand Prix organizers and the Formula I car constructors.

Formula I is the elite formula in Grand Prix motor racing. Engines now are restructed to three litres maximum capacity and are faster, though not necessarily more powerful, than those used in most circuit events.

Cars used at Indianapolis and Le Mans have higher absolute top speeds, but engines are larger. Formula I has been in existence since 1900.

A CSI spokesman said the organizers of Grand Prix races would be allowed to accept entries from Formula II, C Class A, Indi and 5000 cars if there were not enough Formula I entries.

The deadlock between the Grand Prix organizers and the car manufacturers has resulted from the spiralling costs of world championship motor racing.

Grand Prix International, formed by the big race organizers two months ago in an attempt to solve the cash crisis, had earlier warned that Formula I racing was in danger of collapsing unless there was quick agreement with the manufacturers.

HOCKEY TIPS

By Bobby Orr

The second most important shot for a hockey player to master is the backhander.

When the checking is close, a player has to be in a position to take advantage of every opening. You may not have time to get set for a wrist shot.

The backhand is actually a forehand shot that is shot backwards. You use the same procedure, placing your weight forward, cock your wrists, cup the puck, look for the opening and then shoot. Again the follow through is important. When I finish my backhand, the bottom hand is on top of the stick.

Most youngsters find it tough to be accurate on a backhand shot. I suggest you set up a goal or an outline of one on a basement wall. Spend about 15 minutes each day practising your backhand.

Keep a pad and pencil handy and show the number of shots you take each day plus the number that are on the net. When more than 75 per cent of your shots are on the net, mark specific areas. Try for the lower right-hand and left-hand corners and again keep a record. Shots on these areas are worth double points.

At the end of 30 days, check how your shooting has improved. I'm sure you will be pleasantly surprised. On 100 shots, your score should be at least 100, counting two points for the corners.

Bookie Flirtation Ends

GARY PLAYER

LONDON (AP) — No more betting shops on British golf courses. Administrators of the game have decided it's just not the thing to do.

The Royal and Ancient Club, which makes the rules, and the British Professional Golfers' Association, which runs the circuit, decided jointly they would not give permission.

Ladbrokes, the bookie who ran a betting shop at the John Players classic at Turnberry last September, promptly replied that in that case they would not be contributing any more money to tournaments.

Golf's flirtation with the bookies was short-lived. Ladbrokes Betting Shop at Turnberry, under a big tent beside the 18th fairway, was the first ever seen on a British course.

Hundreds of fans used the tent where some bet on the golfers but most of the bets were on the horses.

One player, British Ryder Cup star Harry Bannermann, bet on himself in the tournament, finished fifth and collected $2,000 from the bookies.

But some of Bannerman's rivals made it clear they didn't like it.

Arnold Palmer said betting shops were unnecessary.

"Wherever there is gambling there is a danger of something underhand," he declared.

Gary Player said: "It is not traditional to have this on the golf course."

Britain's Neil Coles said the tent lowered the image of golf.

The Royal and Ancient and the PGA took the same view.

Keith McKenzie, Royal and Ancient secretary, announcing the decision to ban betting shops at all tournaments next year, said:

"If people want to bet they can always go to a betting shop in the town or use the telephone. We felt that too much of the betting at Turnberry was on the horses."

BROTHER DUO TOPS TOURNEY

JOHANNESBURG (Reuter) — South African brothers Harold and Graham Henning won the Ellerines team golf tournament here Saturday with a 255 total, 33 under par for the four rounds of the better-ball event.

The best Canadian team was the Ontario pair of Wayne MacDonald, Bill Tape, who scored 21.

It was Knights' second win in a row over Vikings, who were defeated 67-58 Friday ight.

Tom Holmes of Vikings had his biggest scoring night of the season to top both teams Saturday with 35 points. Warner Pacific's Ed Mazyck scored 22 points while Terry Jorgenson added 16 for the winners, who shot 57 per cent from the floor. Vikings shot 42 per cent.

UNIONDALE, N.Y. (AP) — New York Islanders have called up right winger Dave Pulkkinen from New Haven of the American Hockey League.

Nixons Can't Shake Slump

Maybe it's the law of averages, but whatever the reason Victoria Nixons wish their current slump would end.

Nixons, off to a flying start in the South Island Junior "B" Hockey League this season, continued their losing ways Saturday at Racquet Club by dropping a 6-4 decision to Racquet Club Kings.

Saanich Block Brothers, meanwhile, used only 12 players in a 9-5 victory over Baird's Trucking at Lake Cowichan to consolidate their hold on fourth place.

Bob Boyd did most of the damage to Nixons, scoring three goals for Kings. Brian Maroney, John Nomland and Craig Payland were the other Racquet Club marksmen.

Tom Tillotson and Kevin Schamehorn each counted twice for Saanich while Yvon Clavette, Brad Maxwell, Cam Kring, Brent Patterson and Dwight Crocket each scored once.

Kelly Lowe had two goals for Baird's and Len Busky and Harold Neufer one each as Saanich held a 45-21 shots-on-goal advantage.

Indy Gas Limit Hiked

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind. (AP) — Cars competing in the Indianapolis 500-mile automobile race next year will be permitted to use an additional 25 gallons of fuel.

Officials of the United States Auto Club and the Indianapolis Motor Speedway have announced a revision in rules raising the fuel storage tank from 250 to 275 gallons.

This in addition to fuel carried in race cars tanks at the start of the race. Most have tanks at or close to the 75-gallon maximum.

Last May, drivers Mario Andretti and Dick Simon ran out of fuel near the end of the race.

Computer Is Efficient Nurse

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (UPI) — Faced with a shortage of registered nurses, heart specialists at the University of Alabama Medical Centre turned to a computer, not only to relieve the shortage, but to improve care of patients after open heart surgery.

The system, now in use in a four-bed unit, was developed by physicians and engineers in the university medical centre's department of surgery. The system is the only one of its type in day-to-day clinical use in the world, although similar computers are being used in research projects.

The computer not only maintains a constant watch on patients in the cardiovascular intensive care unit, but will feed blood or plasma to the patient if a need is indicated by a reading of vital signs.

Louis C. Sheppard, an associate professor and engineer in the department, designed the system with the aid of Jack Acton, a research associate who designed and built the special electronic sections.

WENDY DEY — EDITOR

Sheppard says the key to the system's success is its programming, based on information fed into it by Dr. John W. Kirklin, chairman of the department and one of the nation's most respected heart specialists, and Dr. Nicholas T. Kouchoukos, an associate professor.

The computer "carries out many patient care functions automatically," Sheppard says. "There are other similar computers, but those are being used in research projects only. This one works for seven days a week, all year long.

"It's just like other computers," he says. "The difference is in hospital needs. The computer performs measurement functions on the patient, monitoring the blood pressure, heart rate, temperature and other vital signs.

"If the measurements drop below the optimal levels, the system automatically pumps fresh blood into the patient."

Sheppard said the computer can take the same readings on all four beds in 15 seconds that would take 9 nurses 15 to 30 minutes for each patient, and the computer is able to take continuous readings.

"This leaves the nurse free to give more direct, personal care to the patient, or to help with other patients during times of crisis," he said.

A major benefit of the computer system is the reduction of recovery time, Sheppard said.

"With the automated beds, 75 per cent of heart surgery patients are able to be moved to regular care areas within 24 hours, compared to pre-automation periods of up to three days," he said.

"In a typical month, seven non-automated beds and twice the nursing staff would be needed to do the job of the present four automated beds," Sheppard said. "The capacity will soon be expanded to eight beds."

Plans call for 17 automated beds to meet anticipated heavier patient loads when the new Alabama Heart Hospital is built in the medical centre.

Another advantage of the computer system, Sheppard says, is that, unlike humans, it is not affected by fatigue or stress and acts on information fed into it when Kirklin and Kouchoukos were at a peak of alertness.

PILOTS BACKED

WASHINGTON (CP) — The woman in miniskirt uniform serving cocktails to tourist class is firmly behind the pilot of the aircraft when he demands tougher measures against air piracy, says a spokesman for United States airline stewardesses.

"Stewardesses are in many cases more militant than the pilots," Betty Fuhrman, administrative assistant with the flight attendant's division of the U.S. Air Line Pilots Association (ALPA) said in an interview Monday.

"They're always the first to get involved. Usually the gun or the knife is at their throat in a hijack."

Last week's decision in Mexico City by the International Federation of Air Line Pilots Associations to press forward with plans for a worldwide stoppage of air traffic unless more stringent anti-hijack measures are adopted had the prior support of representatives of the approximately 30,000 American stewardesses, stewards and pursers.

ALPA's flight-attendants' division represents approximately half of the U.S. stewardesses.

A majority of the others are represented by the Transport Workers Union, and a Washington official of that union said its members are in absolute agreement with ALPA's stewardesses when it comes to the need for tougher measures against air piracy.

Miss Fuhrman, a stewardess with Western Airlines now on leave of absence to work for ALPA, said representatives of the pilots and flight attendants had met jointly lastmonth to approve an anti-hijack resolution which formed the basis for the Mexico program.

"We agreed on a series of actions leading up to another suspension of air services if, within a reasonable period of time, things don't start happening," she said.

A previous work stoppage last summer fizzled out in the U.S. as a result of court action by the airlines. But Miss Fuhrman said the stewardesses were as heavily involved then as the pilots.

Both pilots and flight attendants want "effective" action by governments throughout the world, including steps to prevent certain countries from offering sanctuary to air pirates.

Jean James, vice-president of Canadian Flight Attendants Association, says: "I feel that any country that a hijacker goes to should return him to the country of origin for trial. As long as they know there are several countries where they can go they'll continue. We stewardesses feel that harsh disciplinary measures should be taken and until this is done they will just carry on as they have in the past."

ALPA officials say that, among the approximately 65,000 pilots and flight attendants in the U.S. one in 75 has been aboard a hijacked plane. Most workers in the business have at least one friend with personal experience of hijacking.

But Miss Fuhrman said hijacking doesn't seem to turn people away from being flight attendants.

"Even among those who have been hijacked, I don't know of any who have resigned because of the experience. Some of them tend to become more demanding for safety measures and put pressure on their employers to improve these measures."

Most Money 'Wasted' On Popular Vitamin E

DALLAS, Tex. (AP) — There's more myth than fact in the current popularity of vitamin E, a St. Louis researcher suggests.

Ninety per cent of the money spent on vitamin E is wasted, said Dr. Robert E. Olson, professor of biochemistry, medicine and surgery at St. Louis University. He told reporters at sessions of the American Heart Association meeting Sunday that wheat germ oil, other vegetable oils and plain vegetables are good natural sources of the vitamin.

He said there was a long list of conditions for which Vitamin E has been thought helpful, including menstrual disorders, abortion, burns, a number of heart and vascular ailments, rheumatic fever, ulcers, diabetes and kidney diseases. Some people, he noted, also mistakenly believed that vitamin E improved virility.

Actually, Olson said, the only type of disease found to benefit from large doses of vitamin E is a cardiovascular ailment known as intermittent claudication. In this disease, the circulation of arteries of the legs is impaired, making walking difficlt and painful.

Olsen said he was "pleading for a more scientific approach" to settling arguments over use of vitamin E in large doses.

The major usefulness of the vitamin in therapy, Olson said, is in treating vitamin E deficiency, a relatively rare disorder in human beings.

With rare exceptions, the daily diet provides all the vitamin E needed by the body — about 20 milligrams — he said, nothing that some persons who prescribe the vitamin for themselves take as much as 1,000 milligrams a day.

Unlike some other vitamins taken in large doses, vitamin E does not have any adverse effects, he said, probably because it is not easily absorbed in the body.

A controversy over vitamin E was stimulated about 25 years ago by Drs. Evan and Wilfrid Shute at the Shute Institute in London, Ont., who reported that large doses of vitamin E were beneficial for treatment of cardiovascular disease.

However, Olson reported to physicians at the sessions, the Shutes' work did not meet sound scientific criteria and other researchers have been unable to substantiate the claims of these physician-brothers.

'Limited Editions' Value in Doubt

Market places are filled with so-called limited editions from silver plates to crystal bells, touted by their purveyors as rare, beautiful and a hedge against inflation. A recent general magazine carried advertisements for 15 different "limited editions." A mail order catalogue listed 300.

But now, auction, art and museum experts, manufacturers, dealers and even collectors are beginning to question whether mass-produced, artificially limited products are as scarce, as artistic or as good an investment as their manufacturers and sellers would lead the public to think.

Timothy C. Tetlow, director of auction company Sotheby Parke Bernet's 84th Street division in New York, said in an interview:

Half Price

"The value of these so-called limited editions has not held up at auctions. The China figurines, for example even those made 10 or 25 years ago, sell at auction for half of their original price.

"We've stopped selling the Boehm bird porcelain figures because of the wild fluctuations in price. The prices are unstable. The Christmas plates, as old as 25 years, have very little value at auction. They bring about two dollars to five dollars each.

"Based on this experience, I would say the so-called limited edition objects being manufactured now will not hold their value. I estimate that in a decade, they will sell for not more than half their original price."

Dr. Paul Perrot, formerly with the Metropolitan Museum's cloisters in New York, the Corning Glass Co., and now the Smithsonian Institution's administrator of the National Museum Act, said recently:

"I find these so-called 'limited editions' distasteful. They are an exploitation of the public. They are only limited by when the stamping machine is turned off. They are images, spurious rarities, fads like hoola hoops.

David Rubin, whose "My Grandfather's Shop, Ltd." in Silver Spring, Md., puts out a 92-page catalogue of "limited editions," which are mailed over the country, offers this precautionary note:

"Although they have only been available for a relatively short time, silver plates have firmly established themselves in the growing field of limited edition collectors' plates. We always recommend to our customers that they should collect plates for their quality and beauty, and that the speculative aspect should be secondary. For buyers whose main interest is investment, the only advice we can offer is that it is too soon to predict which series will appreciate in the course of time."

Orva Heissenbuttel, a writer, dealer and lecturer on antiques and a founder of the 250-member American Antique Arts Association, is organizing a Washington club to be affiliated with the International Plate Association which tries to represent collectors and prevent abuses.

Mrs. Heissenbuttel explains the current craze by saying: "I began including information about contemporary collectibles, such as plates and bottles; in 1969 when I saw this area of collecting was beginning to interest more and more people.

"I feel that it is the public's reaction to the selling of new items for old in antique shops — collectors feel that if they're going to be something new, they want to be in on the ground floor. Soon the plate market took on the aspect of trading on the stock market — collectors are constantly checking the price of the plates they invested in — to see if they've gone up and how much? In only a few instances have they gone down and, of course, a few have not gone up at all."

Eternal Hope

Mrs. Heissenbuttel says she herself likes the ceramic plates, especially the bicentennial commemoratives. But she questions the silver plates. "I think in some instances they are a rip-off on the public. They are certainly overpriced. But it's all part of man's eternal hope of striking it rich."

Many of the major museums across the U.S. have been approached by the various mints, (most of which seem to be named after presidents), with requests to produce items from their collections.

Dr. Joshua Taylor, director of the National Collection of fine arts, said, "I think they're awful. I didn't even answer their letter. I put it in the wastebasket."

Warren Robbins, director of the Museum of African Art, said, "You can't mint art. Those manufacturers are suckering people in."

Kyran McGrath, director of the American Association of Museums, said he was approached about a year ago and asked to lend his organization's name to a limited edition put out by Franklin Mint.

Sounded Wrong

"I must have had an angel sitting on my shoulder, because I turned them down. At the time, I couldn't pinpoint just why it sounded wrong, but it did. I thought, we're poor but not that poor. Thank God, we did turn them down."

Even some of the manufacturers themselves are beginning to question the practices. Robert F. Wilson, president of Wallace Silversmiths of Wallingford, Conn, recently issued a statement saying:

"Are the investment opportunities in limited edition art as unlimited as they appear to be?

"Limited edition art, of course, can be appreciated for its beauty alone. But for many purchasers, financial gain is just as important.

"The common denominator of all limited editions is that quantity is controlled to create extra value. In addition, there are intrinsic values of materials used and the talent required to create the product. After this, return on investment becomes simply a matter of supply and demand.

"Unlike stamps or coins for general circulation, limited editions are private ventures which determine their own supply. After the run is completed, the mold is destroyed as a guarantee to purchasers, and this alone has served to attract a broad market for new collectors.

"Apart from medallic art, which is easily mass produced, there is a growing revival in porcelain art, a more intricate process where each item requires months to complete."

The statement goes on to doubt the value of the porcelain Wallace produces by German seulptor Gunther Gragnet, saying that a 1969 Dolphin Group produced in an edition of 500 at a retail price of 650 dollars is now worth nearly $2,000.

Wilson warns that the buyer should use these guidelines:

"The producer and designer should both be leaders in their fields. The number of pieces should not exceed 7,500. The item should be of superior quality to merit appreciation for its beauty alone."

Wilson divides limited editions into categories, with these comments.

—"Collectible — these are bells, doves, stars, etc. which generally sell for 10 dollars to 25 dollars each. Production limits are set on a yearly basis and they are usually treasured collector's items in which a person buys, for example, a new bell every year.

"They are generally purchased for their beauty and sentimental reasons rather than for investment although handsome prices have been paid by those who seek to complete a series with an out of production item.

—"Commemorative — this category consists of plates, medals, ingots etc. These range in price from 50 dollars to about 250 dollars. This is the area in which many people go astray because they don't know what to look for. Some so-called limited edition plates, for example, actually contain tens of thousands of the same item in a series, and can be of poor quality.

Fewer Items

—"Classic — This is the category which Wallace manufactures. This grouping contains porcelain and precious metals figurines and has fewer items in a series than other limited editions. These usually involve known artists and sell in the area of $500 to $7,500. Production requires very special equipment and a staff of skilled artisians. While this category requires the greatest initial investment, it usually affords the greatest returns and attracts connoisseurs and prudent investors.

"Those who collect limited editions for investment should also consider the elements of personal enjoyment and prestige of displaying such art as part of their home decor."

The Franklin Mint, of course, touts its artists: Stevan Dohanos, wildlife artist Richard Evans Younger, Norman Rockwell, Irene Spencer and Gilroy Roberts, former chief of engraver of the U.S. mint.

The Lincoln Mint is limiting its new plates to 3,000 with 25 in 18-carat gold, and 5,000 of its holy family ignot.

Criticized

When Clement Conger, the White House curator, was criticized for his contract with Franklin Mint authorizing presidential plates and medals in return for royalties for the White House historical association project to refurbish the president's mansion, biddle said:

"I personally don't see it as skullduggery.

"It's a way to raise money so you don't have to use public funds. Since congress doesn't make appropriations for these purposes the money has to be raised in other ways."

Critics pointed out that the Franklin Mint's board chairman, Joseph M. Segel, contributed $113,000 to the Nixon campaign.

And the White House of the Confederacy, in Richmond Va., under the cochairmanship of historian Author Bruce Catton and Virginus Dabey, seems happy enough with its arrangement with Lenox China Company. They pay Lenox 25 per cent of the $250 purchase price for 10 individual, commemorative plates made of bone china. The rest goes to the White house of the Confederacy and its agents, Southeastern Fund Raising, Inc.

Trustees are Mrs. Dwight Eisenhower and Mrs. Lyndon Johnson, Governors Linwood Holton and Ronald Reagan, former Gov. Mills E. Godwin Jr. and U.S. Senator John Stennis.

The newest hottest items, the silver plates and medals, are diverse, to say the least.

Among others, they include:

—Sterling silver plates, inlaid with gold, incised with portraits of presidents, packaged in a blue, pseudo-velvet box with the White House embossed on the front and a certificate inside signed by the White House Historical Association, which takes a 10 per cent royalty for its endorsement. The plates sell for $150.

Sterling silver medals in an the Classic Erotica Collectors edition of 1,000, the first called "Mutual Pleasure," issued by Society. The Riverdale, N.Y. firm advertises it as the first of a series of six ($90) offering "explicit glimpses into the heterosexual life of 2,500 years ago. . . ." And eventually "depicting the progress of man's sensual life through the Roman Empire . . . to the Victorian age." If you pay for the whole series at once you get a table-stand magnifier.

Silver plates and medals are not the half of it.

Among the other "limited" editions offered are an eight-inch Rapunzel poelian figure, edition of 1,000, $375; a 20-inch bluejay on a burning bush porcelain figure, edition of 250, priced at $2,500 and ceramic plates with designs from a casket in a sepulcher, edition of 5,000 and $100 a pair.

Hand Printed

There are also hand-printed French wall hangings, 26½ by 40 inches, in an edition of 200 at $200, and porcelain birds, no number given for the edition, at $950 to $4,000.

Ironically enough, these "limited editions" are, in many cases, priced higher than original — one-of-a-kind-works by contemporary silversmiths, individually made by the artist himself, never to be duplicated, and truly limited to an edition of one. Art objects in this range are available from numerous art galleries and craftsmen's studio.

The question each buyer must answer in his own mind is simply: What's it worth to me?

MOM CASTS SPELL

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I are very happily married, and the possible threat to our marriage is his mother. She is a very interfering divorcee with plenty of time on her hands, and I know she has never liked me.

The problem: she claims to be a witch who can put spells on people. She meets with other members of the occult and they hold seances and claim to be able to communicate with spirits of the dead. She has all sorts of paraphernalia related to her witchcraft, and I am scared to death of this woman when she goes into her chants and trances.

I am expecting a child, Abby, and I don't want her in my house unless she acts like a normal person and refrains from going into her witchcraft act.

My husband says it is all a lot of garbage — he doesn't believe in any of it, and I am silly to worry about it. I say she could be a real witch. I leave it to you. — WORRIED.

DEAR WORRIED: I don't know if she's a real witch or a phony one, but your fears are real, which is more important. Simply tell her she is welcome to visit if she puts aside the witch act — otherwise you will see her in the next world.

DEAR ABBY: Re the husband who never called his wife by her real name:

My fine and devoted husband of 50 years was the funniest (not corniest) man I ever knew. My name is Eleanor, but shortly after we were married, he started calling me any name he could think of. When I asked him why, he said with a twinkle in his eye, "In case I talk in my sleep." So all my married life he called me Hazel, Gretchen or "Pansy." The result is that everyone in the family called me "Pansy," which was a wonderful out for inlaws and grandchildren.

In good-natured retaliation, I never called my husband by his real name, either. I called him Joe — a far cry from Lionel. It's not what you call a person, but the tone of voice that makes the difference. — ELEANOR.

DEAR ABBY: Although I think I know the answer to my question, I need you to confirm it.

A friend's son was married several months ago, and my husband and I sent a telegram offering our congratulations and best wishes. (We know they received it.)

This couple never bothered to send us a "thank you!" According to my bringing up, an acknowledgement was in order. Or doesn't the younger generation follow the old rules? — WONDERING.

DEAR WONDERING: Please don't use the same brush to tar the entire young generation. All well-mannered people still acknowledge telegrams.

That Let-Down Feeling Of Christmas Afternoon

While a vast amount of literary effort and advertising promotion has been expended in extolling the merriment of Christmas Eve and Christmas Morning, very little, if anything, has ever been written about Christmas Afternoon.

But, yes, Virginia, there is a Christmas Afternoon. It exists as surely as does a second day of school, a fifty-first wedding anniversary, and the day after two glorious weeks in Acapulco.

You know that it is Christmas Afternoon when you suddenly notice that there is a big bare spot in the middle of the Christmas tree that you'd never noticed before, and that all the blue lights are on one side.

And the dog, after nosing open the chess set and swallowing two hand-carved white pawns, has bitten the head off of a chocolate Santa Claus. Deciding that he doesn't much care for chocolate after all, he is burying Santa's body in a cardboard box containing someone's new blue angora sweater.

And you discover that the guarantee for the electric blanket, the washing instructions for your slacks and the directions for "Smasheroo: A game of strategy for ages nine to ninety" have been inadvertently thrown out with the Christmas wrappings and are presently buried under a pile of wet coffee grounds and egg shells.

By 4 p.m. all the "D" batteries are mercifully dead. The children have shoved their new toys aside and are playing with the boxes that they came in.

Around 5 p.m. Mother begins wondering what in heaven's name she is going to do with sixteen pounds of leftover turkey and four cups of cranberry sauce, resolving next year to fix hamburgers and French fries for Christmas dinner.

And as the mantle of darkness slowly spreads across the sky, we see the son, sitting in the corner of the living room, busily composing a list of everything that he wants for next Christmas. After all, there is only one more year of shopping left.

Medicine May Stall Onset of Middle Age

NEW YORK (UPI) — You can change that saying about life beginning at 40. Move it up to 50 or 60.

Thanks to medical progress, discovery of new drugs and better nutrition, so-called "middle age" is moving later and later into life. But much of the moving, the slowing of the time clock, also is up to you.

Gerontologists tell us that since we start getting older at birth, there is no one point in time when aging begins. But in later years, our functions naturally decline, usually piecemeal and at different rates.

A woman's ovaries, for example, stop functioning long before the other endocrine glands ,while anyone's skin at age 75 is just as protective (albeit more wrinkled) as it was at age 20.

As Dr. Bernice L. Neugarten, professor of human development at the University of Chicago, puts it, "Today at 50, we are much younger than our parents were (at 50)."

Discussions of our biological clocks and methods of slowing them are in a new publication, "Health Guide to Independent Living" from Action for Independent Maturity (AIM), a division of the American Association of Retired Persons (AARP).

Says the publication, "Even conservative biologists now believe that within the next decade or two it will be possible to alter the biological clock built into us. Conceivably, the clock can be made to run longer, be reset, even turned back."

Today, at the age of 50, the average man has a live expectactancy of another 19 years; a woman, 24.

But the booklet says that "science will be prolonging our lives even further, Before long you may be taking an anti-aging pill. At least 20 different exciting possibilities for such a pill are now being explored."

But don't wait on the pill. The time is now, and your health becomes just about what you are willing to make it, says the publication.

One of the best ways is through exercise — the publication says that most people at 50 retain four-fifths of the muscle strength they had at age 25.

Regular physical activity does many things — helps circulation and respiration, your digestive system is stimulated, back pains often are prevented, and all tissues function better with physical stimulation including the flow of vital chemicals secreted by internal organs.

Exercise of the joints helps slow down the onset of arthritis. Overweight is better controlled. The brain is stimulated, and pleasant fatigue is conducive to peaceful sleep. And, exercise often serves as an antidote to nervous tensions and worries.

What type of exercise is best? The book quotes Dr. Paul Dudley White, the eminent heart specialist: "It matters little what kind ... provided it suits the strength and liking of the individual. It is well to establish a regular habit and to maintain it through thick and thin."

One of the most exciting projects you or somebody in your family can undertake is to construct a camera. All you need are a few inexpensive household materials.

How To Make And Use A Pinhole Camera, explains that a pinhole camera is a can or box into which light can penetrate only through a pinhole. It can be designed for roll or sheet film or for a size 126 film cartridge.

The cartridge pinhole camera is particularly easy to use because you can load and unload it in daylight. A can or box-type pinhole camera has to be loaded and unloaded in a darkroom.

This 12-page pamphlet lists the materials you need and there are easy-to-follow illustrated instructions on how to assemble the camera.

You will find, for instance, that a coffee can with a metal lid will make a good pinhole camera. You could also use a clean paint can or a cylindrical oatmeal box.

To make a shutter for your camera, use a flap of opaque dark paper. Although pinhole cameras don't need a viewfinder, you can make one of cardboard or wire.

Single copies of this fascinating booklet are available free from: Editorial Service Bureau, Kodak Canada Ltd., 3500 Eglinton Avenue West, Toronto 15, Ontario. Please allow at least three to four weeks for delivery.

Old Fashioned Soap May Be Answer

OTTAWA (CP) — Old fashioned soap with a newly developed dispersing agent may be the answer to clean laundry phosphate detergent water pollution problems, says Dr. W. M. Linfield of Philadelphia, a chemic researcher with the United States agriculture department.

Dr. Linfield's research team has developed a soap product containing a newly-developed lime soap dispersing powder.

"It will clean as well as the leading phosphate detergents," he said in an interview Tuesday during a meeting of the American Oil Chemists' Society.

"And it will overcome the old problems associated with soaps."

Some of these old problems were the soap curds that occurred in hard water, the "gumming up of washing machine parts or drains" and the tendency for a soap film to remain in clothes, said the head of the detergent investigation section.

The dispersing agent helps spread the cleaning ingredient through the water and to trap it in the water to carry away the dirt.

Dr. Linfield and one of his associates described the process in technical terms during a session at the meeting Monday.

In the interview, he said his team had come up with the new product during experiments to try to find new uses for animal fats, especially beef tallow.

This product, which is a waste byproduct from animal rendering plants, now is being sold to underdeveloped countries for use in food, but other oils, especially palm oil and other seed oils, are cutting into this market.

Most of the big laundry product manufacturers have had a look at the new process, he said.

"There is a likelihood that at least one of the producers will go ahead."

Both the soap base and the lime soap dispersing agent are made from tallow and there would be sufficient in either the U.S. or Canada for commercial manufacturing purposes, he said. The main problem for soap producers lies in conversion of machinery to the soap process from the detergent process. The machinery has changed considerably.

But the product is non-polluting, he said. And as more governments introduce legislation banning the use of phosphates, "the soap that cleans as well as phosphates used to" will receive more attention, he said.

Hope and Fear Precede Guatamalan Elections

GUATEMALA CITY (AP) — Guatemala, accustomed to political violence, looks ahead with a combination of hope and trepidation toward her 1974 election as several leaders manoeuvre for position.

This beautiful Central American country has been stricken for more than a decade with internal troubles that have hampered its development and brought Guatemalans worldwide embarrassment.

The West German ambassador was kidnapped and killed by leftists, the U.S. ambassador was assassinated and other diplomats kidnapped and held for ransom. Internal battles between leftist guerrillas and the rightist military government left many dead and slowed the economic and political development.

The trouble is still there under the surface but the overall level of political violence has dropped this year. A five-year development program, with emphasis on agriculture modernization, education and health improvements, has started to show results in the countryside.

No one has any accurate count on how many people have died this year in political violence because of the difficulty in distinguishing between a political killing and a death caused by a personal vendetta.

GENERALS MAY RUN

Gen. Carlos Arana Osorio, the army man who was elected to a four-year term in 1970, cannot succeed himself, but he can hand-pick the candidate of his National Liberation Movement (MLN) party. Early speculation includes three generals as possible MLN candidates—Eugenio Kjell Laugerout, the defence minister; Fausto Rubio, the chief of staff, and Gen. Leonel Vessaux.

Arana Osorio was elected by a wide margin in 1970 through a coalition of the rightist MLN with the centralist Institutional Democratic party (PID) and the MLN has already given an indication of its strength by winning more than 70 per cent of the municipalities in local elections earlier this year.

Political activity was forbidden under a state of seige Arana Osorio imposed for several months last year. It was finally lifted in November, 1971, and all constitutional rights restored.

There has not been a coup d'etat in Guatemala since 1962. There now have been two peaceful government transitions. Arana Osorio and other Guatemalan politicians obviously would like that trend to continue.

The MLN-PID candidate is likely to be opposed by Manual Colon, mayor of Guatemala City and founder of the FURD — United Revolutionary Democratic Front, and Rene De Leon Schlotter, leader of the Christian Democrats.

Stutter Cure Claimed

ROANOKE, Va. (AP) — Nearly everyone knows someone who stutters, and until recently there was virtually nothing a stutterer could do about the problem.

Now, though, a professor of psychology at Hollins College here has become widely known for his "cure" for stuttering.

Since 1969, about 90 people have completed Dr. Ronald L. Webster's training program for stutterers—and have learned to speak fluently.

About seven of 10, Webster says, have retained high levels of fluency.

Webster's program is founded on his conclusion that, probably because of a malfunction of the middle ear, stutterers make the sounds of speech incorrectly.

Two muscles in the middle ear contract a fraction too slowly, he believes, thus creating a kind of echo effect when the stutterer hears himself speak.

The sound of his voice is a guiding cue for speech. And, since the stutterer gets his cues just an instant later than normal speakers do, he misses it, Webster reasons.

In the professor's training program, stutterers are retaught the sounds of speech. The program teaches them the precise movements necessary to produce the distinct sounds of English.

If carefully learned, the training becomes the person's natural speech pattern so that the middle ear's confusing signals can be ignored. The program also emphasizes "gentle onset." Stutterers are reminded to start their sounds softly.

Webster has been conducting experiments with surgical correction of the middle ear malfunction, but results to date are inconclusive, he says.

On the Botswana Line, A Struggle for a Mine

GABORONE, Botswana (Reuter) — Out in the hot dusty scrubland near Botswana's border with both Rhodesia and South Africa, engineers are nearing the final stage of work to bring a giant copper and nickel mine into production.

The $100-million Selebe-Pikwe mine is expected to ship its first concentrate to the United States by October.

Selebu-Pikwe is the former British protectorate's biggest mining project. Along with other new mining schemes it is expected to transform Botswana from one of the poorest to one of the richest of the world's developing nations.

Government officials estimate that by 1975 Selebi-Pikwe, and the recently-opened diamond mine at Orapa on the edge of the Kalahari desert, will provide the government with about $17 million a year in direct revenue.

This is more than Botswana's total domestic revenue at the time it gained independence six years ago.

AMONG BIGGEST

Selebi-Pikwe will become one of the biggest mines in southern Africa. Initially it will yield 17,000 tons of refined nickel and more than 15,000 tons of refined copper each and will provide jobs for about 2,000 local workers.

By 1980, when a second mine is brought into production, more than 5,000 jobs should be available to Africans and the town of Selebi is expected to have a population of about 20,000 persons. This will make it one of the largest towns in the country.

Besides the copper and nickel which will be exported to the United States for treatment, sulphur will be extracted from the ore and sent by rail to South Africa for use in manufacturing fertilizers.

Not far from the mine site a huge power station costing nearly $25 million is being built with Canadian air. When completed it will supply power to the mine and nearby Francistown, Botswana's third largest town.

The power station will be run by fuel from a new coal mine at Morupule which the Anglo-American Corp. plans to open.

COLLIERY COSTLY

Costing about $4 million to establish, the colliery will initially produce about 78,000 tons of coal annually. By 1977, production is expected to be more than 200,000 tons a year.

In addition to providing large numbers of jobs in a country with a big employment problem, the Selebi-Pikwe mine is also expected to generate employment in service industries.

Last year, another major new mine was opened up by the South African De Beers group.

Built on what is believed to be one of the largest diamond piles in the world, Orapa's production this year is expected to reach about $7.5 million.

A new town has been built to serve the mine and more than 600 local people have found direct employment in the mine.

Whether more new minerals are found or not, Botswana has already been able to gain greater economic stability. For the first time since independence, Botswana was able to balance this year's budget without aid from Britian.

MUM HAS FORMULA

NEW YORK (AP) — Ten-year-old Timmy Rice, hard on his clothes like most active youngsters, has worn holes through three pairs of dungarees in the last year. His mother doesn't complain though. She's had to pay for only one pair of jeans—the first.

Mrs. Rice isn't a shoplifter. Her magic clothing budget is the result of an apparel guarantee program of Monsanto Textiles Co. Under its Wear-Dated campaign, the company promises that all garments which bear its tags will last for a year of normal wear. Otherwise customers get replacements or their money back, after mailing the garment, Wear-Dated tag and sales slip to Monsanto in New York.

In this age of consumerism, one would think Monsanto would be swamped with returns. But the company says this is not the case except in certain areas, notably children's clothes and work wear.

MANY DON'T BOTHER

"Returns are tolerable but not negligible," says Herbert Rabinowitz, director of apparel merchandising. The main reasons, he said, are customer apathy and sturdy garments.

The program, started 10 years ago to promote the company's synthetic fibres, covers more than 300 items of apparel from underwear to overcoats. The cloth made from Monsanto fibres and the garments made from the cloth are subjected to testing before they can carry the Wear-Dated tags. Monsanto, which asumes the costs of the testing and customers returns, reports there are about 80 million garments carrying the tags at a retail value of about $640 million.

One reason returns are not higher is that "most people are lazy," Rabinowitz said. "If you have to save the guarantee tag, the sales slip, wrap the whole thing up and mail it, the chances are you won't do it."

The Wear-Dated program has been picked up by other fibre producers as well as some mills, but none of them have the scope of Monsanto's. Dow Badische Co., another synthetic fibre manufacturer, began its campaign five years ago and offers a one-year money-back guarantee on a wide range of apparel. Allied Chemical Corp. has a program that covers sleepwear and outerwear and Burlington Industries' guarantee program covers home sewing fabrics.

Ill-Feeling Over Instant Pottery

SACATON, Ariz. (AP)—Indian arts and crafts are booming. And one of the tradition's most skilled practitioners, Joseph Lonewolf of the Santa Clara pueblo in New Mexico, doesn't like it.

"People send me cheques to make pots," he said. "They want to order things I have not even done yet. I have to send them back. I cannot work like that.

"People try to force me to work faster. They push me, but I try to ignore them. I cannot set a time limit on my work."

His work has brought prices of up to $3,000. During the first mass showing of his work in Arizona recently, all of his pots sold within eight hours. The two most expensive sold in the first minute.

"Sometimes I can work on a piece 20 minutes and then I must set it aside for a few days and go on to something else, before I return to it," he said in an interview. "Onepot took me a year to complete. I must do quality work."

Lonewolf, who comes from a family of still-active potters, is a traditionalist.

He believes in performing all steps of the creation himself, digging his own clay and talking to "mother" earth as he works. He then studies the pot before beginning work.

"I sculpture my pots to give them meaning," he says. "And each of them tells a story all its own. But the stories are traditional ones.

"There are many potters who can just stamp on a design or sell one of their seconds. I cannot do this.

"If I make a mistake, I must destroy the pot. I cannot sell anything that is not perfect as I can make it."

Final Approval On Sports Centre

Central Saanich council Friday approved a land-use contract bylaw for a $1.3 million sports centre to be built on an 18-acre site at the corner of Mount Newton Cross Road and Central Saanich Road.

The approval followed a public hearing attended by 200 residents. There were no objections.

The centre will be built by a private company, Western Recreational Resources Ltd., it will include skating and curling rinks, a swimming pool and meeting hall.

Painting Found

GRENOBLE, France (AP) — A famous Renoir painting, The Milk Maid, stolen from the Grenoble Museum Sept. 28, has been found among a bunch of stolen paintings recovered by Italian police at Imperia, near Genoa, the museum announced. The painting was in good condition.

Oh, Those Nurses Who Drink Blood

WINNIPEG (CP) — Nurses drink blood through straws made of glass. At least that's the way it looks to a four-year-old in hospital when a nurse puts a capillary pipette to his pricked finger for a blood sample.

To the little hospital patient this can be a terrifying experience. His nurse no longer seems a helper and comforter.

But at Winnipeg Children's Hospital, this little patient has an ally—Ruth Kettner, director of the hospital's child life department, which succeeded the more traditional play therapy section more than a year ago.

Mr. Kettner, a child psychologist and former nursery school teacher, says "the blood-drinking nurse" is but one manifestation of the many incidents in a children's hospital she describes as "hostile procedures."

To counteract them, Mrs. Kettner makes her playroom and eight friendly, young and pretty child life co-ordinators, also known as play ladies, available to the boys and girls every morning and afternoon.

'LOTS OF LOVE'

"The idea is to get them away from their wards if at all possible and if they don't carry infections that can spread," she said in an interview. "We have no structured program for them here, just lots of toys, lots of companionship and lots of love."

The emphasis on play has completely changed with child life, says Mrs. Kettner. Before the new system went into effect, the actual playroom for the children's hospital was reserved for youngsters admitted for psychiatric conditions.

Patients on surgical or medical wards received regular visits from play therapy staff with toy wagons. The toys were loaned out to them, and they played in their rooms or in playrooms attached to the wards.

The playrooms were underutilized, however, and eventually became offices for medical staff or laboratories.

"To bring everybody together down here is much better," said Mrs. Kettner. "We want the children to meet each other, play side by side and live in a haven where the hostile procedures can be forgotten for a while."

Educator Backs Music in School

MONCTON, N.B. (CP) — "School music can be as meaningful as school sports," says the principal of one of this city's first junior high schools to have a band.

Principal Ross MacCallum of Birchmount school proudly adds: "The kids in our school are prepared to get really involved."

To prove his point he told the story of one boy who was faced with the prospect of leaving the band because his family moved to another section of the city.

That youngster travelled the six or seven miles by bus, with several transfers, to reach Birchmount to keep up his music and his band practices, Mr. MacCallum said.

The driving force behind the creation of the school band at Birchmount was Lynda Coffin, a music and languages graduate from nearby Mount Allison University in Sackville, N.B.

"It would have been impossible without our music specialist," the principal said. "We hired her last year with the support of the school board in District 15, although she had to teach English as well as her music program.

"This year she's strictly music. We're really pleased with the results and we hope to inspire other schools to do the same, although it does need quite a lot of money to start with."

LEARN ON RECORDER

The result of her work is a 28-member school band. Mrs. Coffin is the first music specialist in Moncton to reach children in the elementary grades to play the recorder, a flute with eight finger holes.

Mrs. Coffin said: "We purchased over 400, in soprano, alto and tenor ranges to provide variety. It's fairly easy to teach music to beginners with recorders."

She started her first school band in October, 1971, with only 12 instruments, including trombones, trumpets and brass. Mrs. Coffin has formed a girls' choir for Grades 4 to 6, a junior high glee club, a recorder class, a beginners' band, and the junior high band.

DELAYS KILL HEART PATIENTS

CHICAGO (CP) — Two American heart researchers say that most deaths from heart attacks that occur outside hospitals are due to delay in the patient seeking medical assistance.

Heart attack is one of the leading causes of death in North America today. The two researchers report that of the approximately 400,000 such deaths in the United States each year, close to 250,000 are estimated to occur outside a medical facility.

The investigators, Drs. Manning Feinleib and Michael J. Davidson of the National Heart and Lung Institute in Bethesda, Md., have written in the Journal of the American Medical Association that "by far the greatest delay in the case of a patient with an acute myocardial infraction was his own unwillingness to call for help."

The doctors advocated development of a countrywide network of 24-hour out-patient diagnostic centres to provide quick evaluaton of self-referred or physician-refered patients.

They also urged development of less toxic and more effective drugs that may be self-administered to prevent heart failure in coronary heart diease patients.

There should be increased availability of emergency equipment and drugs at such public facilities as stadia, airports and railway stations they said.

The coronary-prone patient should be identified and educated and he should be taught enough to enable him to know when to seek medical help quickly.

GIOVANNI MAKES LAST CLIMB

ALAMO, Calif. — Every Christmas for the last 23 years, Giovanni Nuzzini has climbed a pine tree in the hills near this San Francisco Bay area suburb and strung it with colored lights.

When he started the tree was only seven feet tall, but it has grown to 35 feet.

"It's not hard," Nuzzini said. "The higher I get, the better I feel."

But this year marked his last climb, for the tree is dying and will be cut down this spring.

His wife, Mary, said she is glad the tree-trimming is over.

Nuzzini is 85 years old.

Santa Search

CLEVELAND — What does a hijack-conscious security guard do when a man wearing a Santa Claus suit and carrying a bulging sack starts to board an airplane?

Guards at Hopkins International Airport went through all the packages the costumed fellow was carrying in his sack Sunday afternoon.

But just as Edward Cline has said, all were Christmas gifts, and he was finally cleared for the flight to Washington, D.C.

Cline, of Tiffin, Ohio, and his wife planned to pay a surprise visit to relatives. The red suit was part of the holiday surprise, they said.

Atlas, two years ago at 78 (left) and in his prime

'MOST-DEVELOPED MAN' CHARLES ATLAS DIES

NEW YORK — Charles Atlas, who for three decades told comic book and magazine readers he could turn them from 97-pound weaklings into he-men, has died at the age of 79.

He succumbed to a prolonged heart ailment, doctors said.

Services are scheduled for Wednesday at Our Lady of the Meraculous Medal Roman Catholic Church in Point Lookout, N.Y.

Even in his 70s Atlas had muscles that would make a man decades younger jealous.

Atlas was born Angelo Siciliano in Acri, Italy, on Oct. 30, 1893, and came to the United States in 1904 with his father.

His advertisements, showing a 97-pound weakling sprayed with sand by a bully, came out of a confrontation he had on a beach. He recalled:

"One day I went to Coney Island and I had a very pretty girl with me. We were sitting on the said. A big, husky lifeguard, maybe there were two of them, kicked sand in my face. I couldn't do anything and the girl felt funny. I told her that someday, if I meet this guy, I will lick him."

Atlas said the girl found herself another date and he started his system of exercises. He then saw a statue of Atlas in Coney Island and decided to adopt the name.

A barrel-chested man with amazing strength and physique, Atlas was later called the "world's most perfectly developed man" in a physical culture exhibition in 1922 at Madison Square Garden.

In 1938, when he weighed 178 pounds, Atlas towed a 145,000-pound railroad car through a pennyslvania railroad yard. Using one rope, he moved the heavy car 122 feet along the track.

In middle age, his chest measured 47 inches in normal position. He had biceps that measured 17 inches and a 32-inch waist.

The theory of his bodybuilding system was to pit one muscle against another. Variations of the system have developed into a tremendous part of American business.

His wife died in 1965. Surviving are two children, a daughter, Diani, and a son, Herc, a mathematics teacher in Santa Monica, Calif.

Danny's a Fireman

SAN FRANCISCO — Danny Roberts' dream of becoming a San Francisco fireman came true — 11 years earlier than he expected.

The nine-year-old youngster is Engine Company 41's biggest fan, friend and volunteer worker.

Fire Chief Keith Calden has made made Danny "an honorary member of Engine Company 41, by the order of the officers and men of the company."

A red wagon, officer's belt, citation, a fireman's card and a box of candy went along with the presentation by Calden, with Engine 41 friends looking on outside Danny's house.

To work on the fire lines, however, Danny will have to wait until he's 20. His honorary membership will permit him to help roll up the hoses for his fellow firefighters and do other station chores.

WASHINGTON — Songwriter Irving Berlin has given a holiday gift to Smithsonian Institution: the old upright piano on which he created such tunes as White Christmas and Easter Parade.

The scarred mahogany piano is fitted with a special mechanism called a transposing keyboard, which operates like the clutch of a car and shifts the keyboard to the right or left into a different musical key.

AMMAN — The British-born divorced wife of King Hussein, Princess Muna, obtained custody of their four children and was given Humar Palace 15 miles west of Amman.

Princess Muna, 31, daughter of a British army officer, is in Jordan with the children, Abdullah, 10; Feisal, 9, and four-year-old twin daughters Zein and Aisha, the spokesman added.

The two sons will return to private school in Britain next week.

Hussein, 37, divorced his wife of 11 years last week and was married on Christmas Eve to Alia Toukan, 24, a Palestinian and daughter of a retired diplomat from the West Bank town of Nblus.

By taking a West Bank Palestinian as a bride, and naming her Queen Alia, Hussein apparently sought to consolidate his position with citizens in the Israeli-occupied area.

Auditor Due to Retire in March

By STEWART MacLEOD

OTTAWA (CP) — Auditor-General Maxwell Henderson, whose running feud with the government is reaching war-like proportions, is due to retire in four months—but it likely will be a stormy four months.

And if the Conservative opposition has its way, Mr. Henderson will stay in office past his scheduled March retirement. With the consent of the auditor-general, the Conservatives plan to mount a campaign to have his term extended.

It could be embarrassing for the Liberal government which has spent years trying to live down charges that it is deliberately interfering with the auditor-general's work.

Many of the charges have come from Mr. Henderson himself, the most recent a few weeks ago in Calgary when he said the government has made a "direct attempt to impair" the functions of his office.

REPORT LATE

He said the government once again has turned down requests to stop downgrading the positions of senior officials in his department. Because of his staff situation, his annual report would be late again.

As with earlier such charges, Treasury Board President C. M. Drury replied with a statement that the board has approved the staff and budgetary requests made by the auditor-general. He said earlier that the public service commission also has offered to give the auditor-general power to recruit and appoint his own staff.

"But that offer has been refused."

In addition, he has said, the government expressed will-general complete freedom in settling staff salaries. "But this proposal never was acted upon."

GENERATES FRICTION

The nature of Mr. Henderson's job—keeping a critical eye on government spending—is bound to create some friction with the government. "And if we squabble with him on these other issues," says one cabinet minister, "we are automatically accused of trying to suppress his auditing reports."

"It's no secret that some of Mr. Henderson remarks about spending—some cabinet ministers refer to them as editorial comments—have infuriated the government. There had been earlier, unsuccessful, attempts to eliminate this unsolicited advice from the auditor-general.

Several years ago the government had to withdraw a new auditor-general's act under opposition criticism.

Now a new one has been drafted, this time by a committee established by the Commons' public accounts committee. The draft will be ready when Parliament opens Jan. 4, but after it is presented it must pass through two committees and the House itself.

Mr. Henderson was reported to have told his staff that "we cannot look for any early action on the new promised legislation," which would give the department its own act, rather than coming under sections of the present Financial Administration Act.

Sources say Mr. Henderson is anxious to remain in office until the new act becomes law. The government is probably just as anxious that he quietly go away.

But against all the charges of governmental interference, it may be embarrassing for cabinet to reject requests for an extended term.

The Conservatives had planned to present a private member's bill on the subject, but some party advisors say it might be classified as a "money bill"—requiring the expenditure of funds—and therefore only the government could introduce the bill.

"But we'll keep at it one way or another," says a Conservative MP.

Divorce Attacked

ROME (Reuter) — A group of 23 Italian archbishops and bishops have called on Italian Roman Catholics not to let divorce, which they described as "one of the worst misfortunes of civil society," become established in the country. A referendum is to be held in Italy some time next year on divorce, which became legal here in December, 1970, despite fierce opposition from the Vatican.

BOYS LEAD POLICE IN SPEEDY CHASE

ROME (AP) — Police chased a car through Rome's narrow streets at speeds of up to 120 miles an hour, and found two 11-year-old boys inside when they caught up. "We just wanted a little fun," one of the youngsters explained. They said they found the keys in the car's ignition.

Commercial Image For Canadian Mint

By JAMES NELSON

OTTAWA (CP) — For $261.50 there is a complete set of special gold and silver Iranian coins available from the Royal Canadian Mint that probably will contribute to the mint's 1972 profit.

A certified cheque or money order to the mint, or payment through an American Express credit card, will do the trick.

It's part of the new commercial image the mint has taken on since becoming a federal Crown corporation rather than simply a branch of government.

The Iranian coin sets are advertised in a richly colored pamphlet with an accompanying letter from Gordon W. Hunter, master of the mint, through a widely dispersed direct-mail campaign. The letter is directed to coin collectors as valued clients.

For many years, in addition to turning out coins for general domestic use and specially minted collectors' issues, the mint has made money by making coins for other countries. It recently minted 100 million coins for Venezuela. An order from Brazil took two years to complete.

It also has produced numerous collectors' sets for other countries, including many of the islands of the Caribbean. The Iranian set may not be the mint's biggest order, an official said, but it is being advertised in the most impressive way.

It should be profitable not only to the mint and to the Iranian government, but to the Iranian government's agent in the case, Paramount Coin Co. of Englewood, N.J. It is one of a number of firms that undertake such promotions for foreign governments.

The Iranian sets of nine coins — four in gold and five in silver — are arranged in royal blue presentation cases, accompanied by a certificate declaring the coins to be legal tender. No similar coins are being minted, however, for general circulation in Iran.

The promotion declares that Empress Farah Diba personally selected the coin designs, two of which show profiles of herself and the shah. Other designs show the ruins of Persepolis and the Cylinder of Cyrus, described as the first edict on human rights ever to be promulgated.

The advertising bears signs of American super-salesmanship. It refers to the Royal Mint of Canada, and emphasizes that the coins might be a good investment. It cites the rare case of an Israeli coin issued in 1965 at a cost of $1.25 that recently sold for $265.

PLASTIC SURGERY ON INSTALMENT PLAN

SAO PAULO (AP) — Plastic surgery—that rejuvenating technique of the rich and the famous—has gone the way of instalment plans and lot-drawing in Brazil in an effort to reach the average housewife. And men, too.

"This is a unisex plan," says Delvi Berger, a lawyer and general manager of FINAC, a Sao Paulo firm which finances car buying and has launched a plan to finance plastic surgery operations under the typically Brazilian "consorcio" system.

A consorcio is a type of credit club in which members make monthly contributions to a general fund for a stated period, usually 30 months. In the case of cars, the consorcio buys two a month. A drawing decides who gets the cars first.

At the end of 30 months, everybody has a car. Even after getting his car, a member must continue paying monthly contributions until the consorcio ends.

"Liz Taylor snatched Burton after 12 magnificent plastic-surgery operations," a brochure for prospective customers says. "How many will you need to snatch your husband?"

The plan met initial opposition from the Brazilian Society of Plastic Surgery, which represents plastic surgeons in this country. The society wrongly believed the group was tied to a specific group of doctors, in violation of the society's code of ethics.

But FINAC only handles the money side for patients, who must get in touch with the doctor.

MONEY BIG PROBLEM

"The problem with an esthetic plastic-surgery operation has been having the money to get one," says Berger, explaining the "why" of a plastic surgery consorcio.

"If a Brazilian woman is willing to sacrifice part of her monthly earnings to satisfy female vanity by going to a beauty parlor or buying cosmetics, then she can also make a small sacrifice to get some plastic surgery."

Under FINAC's plan, "any woman can get her longed dream of esthetic operation," an ad claims.

Brazil has one of the world's most famous plastic surgeons, and plastic surgery is big business here. The plastic surgeon's society says more than 8,000 persons had operations last year in Sao Paulo alone.

Blind Man's Buff in Vietnam

By MURREY MARDER
WASHINGTON POST

WASHINGTON — For the world at large, the floundering Vietnam negotiations and their jolting B-52 bombing aftermath continue to be a grim game of blind man's buff.

Without access to the text of the proposed agreement between the United States and North Vietnam, and the accompanying "understandings" and protocols no one can make a factual independent judgment of the accusations of blame that Washington and Hanoi are flinging at each other over who reneged on what. Only fragments of information, surrounded by deliberate disinformation, fill the air.

The argument against disclosing the texts is that publication could jeopardize any chance for completing the blocked negotiations. But this will become an increasingly untenable rationale if the battle continues and a war in which the beginnings were cloaked in secrecy becomes a war whose continuance cannot be explained for reasons of national security.

EVEN LESS

The public as a whole knows even less than it thinks it does about what happened to the expectations for "peace" that soared so high in late October, only to be punctured in December. The press, with a few notable exceptions, bears some culpability also, if only because too often it acted as a mirror, simply reflecting what it was told, without sufficient persistent questioning of all that was placed in front of the mirror.

On Oct. 26, North Vietnam issued what is still the only detailed account about the substance of the negotiations that exists on the public record, in the form of a nine-point summary. Henry Kissinger swiftly endorsed that account as "correctly summarized."

NO 'NINE POINTS'

But in fact there is no "nine-point" negotiating draft, despite repeated use of that term as a result of journalistic compression.

American and North Vietnamese officials still refuse to disclose even how many points there are in the elusive and ill-named "peace" package. A Nixon administration official elliptically told newsmen in Washington last Wednesday: "The nine points were really a schematic description of an agreement that has a totally-different number of articles than nine."

The October version of the accord was hailed by the White House as 90 per cent complete; last week, when Kissinger acknowledged that the negotiations had reached an impasse, he said they were "99 per cent completed as far as the text of the agreement is concerned."

ONE DECISION

"But that alone is not the problem," Kissinger acknowledged, because while "we are one decision away from a settlement," which he said Hanoi "already had agreed to" two weeks earlier and then pulled back, Kissinger acknowledged that the omission is fundamental. A draft which is even 99.9 per cent complete still adds up to no agreement whatever. Any doubt about that was wiped out last Monday in the roar of bombs over Hanoi and Haiphong.

From what Kissinger said, and left unsaid, independent analysts concluded that the unresolved question appeared to be an attempt by the United States to try to underwrite South Vietnamese President Nguyen Van Thieu's claim to "sovereignty" over all South Vietnam, despite U.S. approval of a standstill cease-fire that accepted the presence of North Vietnamese forces in the south. Then administration officials backed away from the "one decision" terminology.

RED HERRING

The "sovereignty" question is a "a red herring," an administration official said, and the problem is no single issue. What is lacking from Hanoi, he said, is the political will to fulfill an agreement that is originally made. North Vietnam makes exactly the opposite claim.

It may be that the United States has an overwhelmingly convincing case, if it can document it. Or perhaps North Vietnam does. In the absence of facts, the opposing arguments must be taken on faith. But blind faith disappeared years ago where Vietnam is concerned — an early casualty of the war.

SOUTH VIETNAMESE movie star Bach Tuyet leaves no questions as to where her sentiments about the war lie as she arrives in An Loc to entertain troops wearing a flight helmet inscribed Peace Hell, Bomb Hanoi.

Survivors Ate Bodies

SAN FERNANDO, Chile (CP) — Survivors of a Uruguayan plane crash high in the Andes Mountains helped keep themselves alive for almost 10 weeks by eating the bodies of fellow passengers who died in the wreck, Chilean police sources say.

Police in Santiago said doctors and rescue workers were told of the cannibalism by some of the 16 survivors.

They preserved bodies in snow and ice and dissected them with razor blades, the police reported. After food supplies aboard the Fokker Friendship plane of the Uruguayan Air Force were exhausted, the survivors ate one body every five days. Five bodies had been consumed by the time help arrived.

Eight survivors were rescued by helicopter Saturday and flown to hospital. Eight others were rescued Friday before poor flying conditions forced postponement of the completion of the mission.

They appeared at a news conference Saturday—their faces burned by the wind and sun, their lips puffed and their hands bruised and swollen—and told how the 16 remained on an icy ledge for 60 days with the frozen bodies of 29 companions.

One told reporters of living through the crash at 10,000 feet on the Argentine side of Chile's border and then surviving avalanches and blizzards while the bodies of his mother and sister remained nearby.

The group, members of a rugby team, told reporters at a hospital in San Fernando that it was their team spirit and faith that kept them alive after the plane bringing them to Chile smashed into the Andes during a blizzard Oct. 13.

Fernando Parrado, 23, whose mother and sister perished in the crash, and Roberto Canessa, 20, spent 10 days hiking down the mountains in a desperate last-ditch effort to reach civilization.

They found a mule driver late last week and the air force stepped up the search which had been discontinued due to bad weather and failing hopes.

The 16 set up collective responsibility for rationing their meagre food supply of chocolates and other small sweets they had carried with them, and edible roots.

The Lord is my shepherd: I shall not want.
He maketh me to lie down in green pastures: He leadeth me beside the still waters.
He restoreth my soul: He leadeth me in the paths of righteousness for His name's sake.
Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death; I will fear no evil: for thou art with me; thy rod and thy staff they comfort me.
Thou preparest a table before me in the presence of mine enemies; thou anointest my head with oil; my cup runneth over.
Surely goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life: and I will dwell in the house of the Lord for ever.
PSALM 23.

YOUR HEALTH: Dr. Walter Alvarez

Gums Atrophy with Age

At a recent meeting of the American Society for Preventive Dentistry, Dr. Aufenbaum reported that as people grow old, their gums may atrophy and recede. Then they may get pyorrhea (an inflammation of the gums) and some of their teeth may become brittle, the roots may become infected and the person may have to lose several teeth.

A person may have hard, good teeth for most of his life, and then, when he reaches the age of 75 or so, he may suddenly develop pyorrhea.

Another problem that can come to an older person is that a number of teeth sockets can become inflamed, and the nerves to these teeth can die. Then the person may have to spend a while going to a dental surgeon, having teeth extracted.

With age the teeth become drier and more brittle, and the greatest problem that the old person faces can be trouble with the gums, which develop abscesses. The older person is fortunate if he has a good dental surgeon.

I have read recently of the terrible difficulties that are being faced by dozens of young people who, while travelling around in Europe, made the mistake of buying some marijuana or other psychedelic drug, perhaps because it was cheap or perhaps because they thought the police in Europe were not as fussy as they are in America. But in many cities they made a terrible mistake, because they were promptly arrested, put in jail, and with so high a bail that they cannot get out. Also, they often find out that the rights and privileges that were theirs at home do not exist for them in a foreign country.

Many other youngsters travelling in Europe and the Near East put some marijuana or LSD or some other drug into their suitcase. It was found at the border, and again, the penalty was high and the youngster now does not know how he is going to be able to get freed. Some such youngsters have been in jail for several years, and there is very little prospect of their getting out.

Any youngster with plans to travel to Europe should realize the terrible risk he is running when he becomes involved in the drug world there.

Picture Told the Tale In Hunt for Cameraman

TRURO, N.S. (CP) — Friends thought Mrs. Fulton Copp was "crazy" for her camera bag caper but in the end she was really "happy" about the way things turned out.

It all began last August when Mrs. Copp and a friend were visiting a park near here. As they were about to leave, Mrs. Copp found a camera bag containing a flash and film.

A gardener was unable to help Mrs. Copp locate the owner and calls to the lands and forest department, police and a tourist information centre also proved fruitless.

There was no identification in the camera bag. Then Mrs. Copp decided to have the film developed in the hope that there might be some clue as to the owner in the film slides.

Without a slide projector, she went to another friend's home, viewed the slides and found one containing a picture of a car with Quebec licence plates.

She returned to the RCMP where she traced the owner of the car, wrote the owner and mailed the camera bag to the owner's address.

Several months later a letter appeared in the Truro newspaper signed by Ronald Tees of Ste. Marthe sur le Lac, Que. It read: "A big vote of thanks to Mrs. Copp who proves there are still honest people in this world."

Mr. Tees wrote: "I can't express enough my gratitude for someone who would go to the trouble to do what this wonderful person did."

What would motivate a person to go to all that trouble to find the owner of the camera bag?

GARDENING
hilda beastall

The shortest day is now behind us, and with a bit of luck ahead, we can sow a dozen seeds of an early variety tomato, expecting vine ripened fruits before the end of May.

We need a heated greenhouse, or a heated porch with light from three sides since limited light is the restricting factor.

From the dozen seedlings we select the best six for putting into three-inch pots. Growth will be slow until March; by that time the seedlings will be stocky plants about four to five inches tall, ready for transferring into large clay pots or wooden tubs.

Varieties change with the years. Best of All used to be a reliable indoor variety for the amateur. It still is, if you can find the seeds. A newer early, though it can be grown outdoors equally well later in the season, is Early Fireball.

This is a determinate (or bush) type, with fruits just a little smaller than Fireball, a reliable outdoor early for the past 20 years in the Victoria area.

These bush kinds of tomatoes are not given fertilizer until the first fruits can be seen, which will be early April on greenhouse plants, and late May on those going outdoors.

Tomato plants rely on plentiful humus in the soil for maintaining an even moisture supply for growth, but no manure or the plants will make too much green growth at the expense of setting fruits.

Sowing a dozen seeds on Boxing Day became a tradition in our greenhouse. The seedlings are pricked out just as soon as the first true leaves can be seen emerging from the seed leaves. Lanky plants are avoided by keeping the seedlings up near the overhead glass in the day time, bringing them away from the glass radiation of cool air at night. In a porch, raise the plants to be level with the glass.

Watering is done carefully — no great job with only six tomato plants. Never water when the temperature is likely to go down; and do use tepid, or warm water, for tomatoes are easily checked in growth by chilly water at their roots. Keep the plants on the dry side, but never allow them to wilt.

Some gardeners like to pot the seedlings into the big containers right at the beginning. I don't recommend it for this time of the year in our area of low light intensity and slow growth. The mass of soil can easily be too wet and cool for these semi-tropical plants. So often we have a week or more with no sunshine, during which period growth is at a standstill.

Better to have three-inch clay pots almost full of roots when the plants are transferred in March, then they will make rapid progress in the longer days.

Best of All is a staking variety; put a 15-inch stake into the big pot at time of transferring, to avoid root damage later.

At all times expose the plants to whatever sunshine there is. Light is more important than high temperatures for indoor, or amateur greenhouse tomato plants.

SOLUTION WEDNESDAY

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

In today's deal, our South declarer arrived at a small-slam contract which, in the post-mortem analysis, was revealed as being not a too difficult one to handle properly. I think the above statement will be concurred in by everyone — after South's play has been observed. Actually, winning play necessitated nothing more than applying a "little thing" which the "counter" has stored in his arsenal of winning techniques.

East-West vulnerable. South deals.

NORTH
♠ K 9 5 2
♡ K J 8
◇ J 10 4
♣ 6 5 3

WEST
♠ 8 4 3
◇ 9 7 3

EAST
♡ Q 9 7 6 5 3
◇ 8 6 5 2

SOUTH
♠ A Q J 10 6
◇ A K Q
♣ A J

South	West	North	East
2 ♠	Pass	3 ♠	Pass
6 ♠	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: King of ♣.

As soon as the opening lead was made, and dummy came into view, it was obvious that declarer had two potential losers, one in clubs and one in hearts. Since the loss of a club trick was inevitable, the success of declarer's contract depended on avoiding the loss of a heart trick. And the latter, in turn, required guessing which way to finesse for the heart queen.

Upon winning the opening club lead with his ace, declarer cashed the ace, king, and queen of trumps, noting that West followed suit to all three leads. Then came the ace, king, and queen of diamonds, with the observation being made that everybody around the table followed suit to all three leads.

At this point, I imagine that most bridge players would tend to finesse against East, for the heart queen, on the assumption that since West had started with three trumps and East with but one, East, with more "unknown" cards in his hand, was more likely to have the heart queen. But even as they finessed, it would be with no real feeling that the finesse would win.

After cashing his diamonds, our actual declarer led the jack of clubs to West's queen. West returned the ten of clubs, which South ruffed. On this trick East discarded a low heart.

West was now known to have been dealt three spades and three diamonds. And with East having failed to follow suit to the third club lead, West had to have started with exactly six clubs.

Next came the four of hearts to the board's king. West playing the deuce. All of West's original cards were now known. The "guaranteed-to-win" finesse was then taken against East's queen of hearts, and that was that.
